Street Railway Location.

The Road Commissioners at the outset of last Saturday's hearing, stated that they deemed they did not have the jurisdiction to lay a location for a street railway, but were willing to hear the petitioners, as perhaps they had the power to say how a road should be built, if granted.

Messrs. H. M. Federhen, J. F. Merrill, Theophilus King and Fred H. Smith appeared and spoke in favor of the proposed road and there were no remonstrants. The Commissioners asked many pertinent questions. They did not take very kindly to the proposed rail.

The Selectmen have been petitioned as the law requires, and have advertised a hearing for Wednesday, Oct. 12th.

Information Wanted.

We have been frequently reminded the past two weeks of omissions made by the Sunday Globe, which purported to give the names of all the citizens in Quincy who were over eighty years of age. There seem to be quite an interest, the Patriot desires to publish a complete list. With that in view the publishers desire the cooperation of all its readers.

First, we desire the names of all over seventy years of age or three score years and ten; their residence and age.

Second, we desire the names of those couples who have been married over forty years, the number to be stated.

If returns are received in season the Patriot will publish the lists Oct. 22nd. Please call the attention of aged people to the above, or send the desired information to Frank P. Prescott, post office address, Quincy.

Pastor Welcomed Home.

Rev. F. A. Friguetti, pastor of the Catholic church in Quincy, returned Tuesday from his trip to Europe. During his absence his people had not been idle, for they had prepared to give him a warm reception and to welcome him with a substantial testimonial. Consequently on Tuesday evening there was a very large and demonstrative gathering of nearly 3,000 at the Quincy Opera House to carry out the programme, which also commemorated the twenty-fifth anniversary of the reverend gentleman's ordination to the priesthood, although attained some three years ago.

The programme comprised several orchestral selections, solos, trios, quartettes, choruses etc. After which Dr. Joseph M. Sheahan made an address of welcome. Many who were attracted largely to hear the doctor speak were much disappointed because they could not hear him. Rev. T. Danahy followed presenting Fr. Francis with a manuscript poem of his own composition, which apparently surprised, and thanked the people heartily for the kind welcome they had accorded him. He spoke briefly of his trip abroad, and the progress being made in Ireland against English rule. Bishop Healy of Portland, Maine, followed with brief complimentary remarks, which provoked much merriment.

Besides those mentioned there were on the platform, Frs. Maginnis of Jamaica Plain, Millerick, Murphy, McNulty and Wilson of South Boston, Flynn of Brockton, Fitzgerald of Milton, Fagan of Hopkinton and Reardon of Haverhill, and the following reception committee:

William Brown, George Cahill, John Cavanagh, Timothy Coffey, John B. Casey, William Crotch, John Cole, Timothy Dacey, and H. Dinegan, John H. Hayes, Samuel M. Duggan, Cornelius Duggan, James F. Duggan, William Harkin, John Hessey, Patrick F. Lally, James Martin, John A. McDonald, John McGovern, Henry McGrath, William Mulcahy, Conrad Miehler, John McKenna, Edward Murphy, Jeremiah Murphy, Thomas O'Brien, 2d, Michael O'Brien, Eugene W. O'Connor, Cornelius O'Connell, Edward Shea, Thomas Slavin, James Spear, Adam Vogel, James M. Hite.

To our subscribers. Through some carelessness the PATRIOT which were mailed from this office last Friday night, failed to reach their destination until Monday, and some in this vicinity even, were not received until Saturday morning.

On inquiry, we were informed that the mail containing PATRIOT left the Quincy Post Office at the usual hour Friday evening, and we think the trouble must have been incurred in the Boston office. In justice to ourselves we make this explanation. It is very annoying to subscribers not to receive their papers on time, and we hope they will not have occasion for further complaint.

There seems to be a screw loose somewhere in the Boston office that needs looking after, and we hope Postmaster Corse or his head clerks will look after the matter, and get it straightened out.

NEARLY COMPLETED. The Presbyterian Church of Quincy, corner Quincy and Water Streets, is nearly completed. Oct. 10th, if the way be clear, S. S. C. Logan of Scranton, Pa., a distinguished and eloquent divine, will preach the sermon. This church has had quite a struggle, having secured about one-half of the means to dedicate free of debt from abroad. It needs all the help it can get. Those who have subscribed and are willing to help a worthy cause, or a church where one is much needed and will do great good, can leave their money with Mr. George L. Gill, at Savings Bank.

THE JENNIE CALEF COMPANY. In consequence of the "pirate" circular issued by Manager Spear of the Quincy Opera House early in the week, the players of the Jennie Caled Comedy Company on Wednesday evening, was but slimly attended. The company were indignant at being classed as pirates, and represented on the stage that they had the right to act the plays advertised. They made a good appearance, and those who were frightened away missed a fine entertainment. The company have secured the Town Hall on every evening of next week and will show the town that they can present good performances.

AMERICA'S CUP. In the race for the America's Cup Tuesday over the inside course, in New York Bay, the Volunteer beat the Scotch cutter Thistle 19 minutes and 23 seconds. The breeze was light, a circumstance supposed to favor the foreigner.

The second race to take place Thursday was postponed because of the unfavorable weather.

Great interest was manifested in the result of the first race. Souther's periodical store was crowded Tuesday evening with those wishing to read the late editions of the dailies, and congratulate themselves that the Boston sloop had won such a handsome victory.

Yesterday's contest was undecided when we went to press, and reports were conflicting.

SUPPLEMENT.

The Quincy Patriot.

SATURDAY, OCT. 8, 1887.

Political.

The cooks have already got the political pots boiling, and will keep up the fires until next November, when they will be allowed to go out, and we shall have an era of quiet until next year shall bring the excitement of a presidential campaign with drums, bands, torchlight processions, and all the concomitants usually attending the election of a president. This is an "off year," and we may expect a light vote. Some people have a speculative turn of mind however, and like to calculate chances. Hence we find calculations as to the strength of the several candidates. The Mugwumps, it is said, will not vote for Mr. Lovering, nor will they support Mr. Ames. Neither of these gentlemen seem to answer the demands of these "gentle hermits." They are somewhat like the negro at the campmeeting. "There are two roads," said the preacher, "one leads to everlasting fire, and the other to eternal perdition." "Then," replied the descendant of Africa, "this old nigger takes to the woods."

There is a certain class of people who think going to the polls to vote is beneath their dignity. We once heard a man in this town when asked to go to town meeting, replied that "he didn't intend to mix up with the dirty crowd." Any person who holds such an opinion is either very selfish or very ignorant. He either holds his own ease and pleasure greater than that of the public or is ignorant of the principles underlying his own government. Every one ought to vote, and our advice is to go to the polls, and then vote for whom he chooses.—Canton Journal.

Another Statue of Liberty.

A monument of Liberty is to be constructed on one of the Twin Peaks which overlook the harbor of San Francisco. Adolph Sutro has let the contracts for the work, which is to cost between $5,000 and $6,000. The figure and pedestal will be forty feet high. The figure will be eighteen feet high, and will be that of a woman modeled after Bartholdi's great work in New York harbor in this respect, that in the right hand will be borne aloft a powerful torch inside of which will be an electric light. In the left hand will be the sword of justice, and at her feet will be the fallen figure of Anarchy and Despotism endeavoring to pull down the hand which grasps the sword. The whole structure will be made of bluish sandstone. The light will be 1,000 feet above the level of the bay, and its rays will be seen for miles along the coast and out at sea. The pedestal will rest in the base cut in the solid rock of the Peak. When built, the statue will prove of great value to the mariner, and will be one of the noted objects on the Pacific slope. With Bartholdi's statue in New York harbor, and this new work of art throwing its rays upon the bay of San Francisco, the light of liberty will be thrown from ocean to ocean.—Demorest's Monthly.

MISAPPROPRIATED FUNDS. According to a dispatch to the New York Herald from Chicago, the Knights of Labor, a labor journal of the latter city, charge that there is something wrong in the office of the General Secretary of the Knights of Labor. The article claims that a large number of local assemblies in Chicago and vicinity have been suspended lately for non-payment of their per capita tax; that receipts have been signed by C. H. Litchman, covering the alleged defaulted tax, eight or ten months ago. Most of the taxes were sent by Post Office order and required signature before they could be paid.

Boss Shepherd came near being mobbed at one time while he was making his improvements in Washington, and he was charged with all sorts of wrong doing, but it never appeared that he made anything by it, and in fact he became poor, and for years he has been managing a mine in Mexico to build up his fortune. The people of Washington now appreciate what he did for the city, and a great demonstration of welcome is proposed on the occasion of his visit, and he is styled "the deliverer from the dust of antiquity," which he was.

The Worcester Telegram says that if the third party Prohibitionists "had one-half the zeal for solid work that their noisy professions indicate, they can carry two-thirds of the Republican caucuses in Massachusetts for temperance candidates and measures. They don't want to accomplish that. They just want to howl and smash things."

The pension rolls contains the names of 18,131 citizens of Massachusetts, to whom $80,862 is paid quarterly, an average income of $131.46.

The Heeling Machine.

The Westboro Chronotype says that the two hundred or more boot and shoe manufacturers who use the Bigelow & McKay heeling machine, have contributed largely toward making the owners thereof millionaires, by way of paying royalties, and are organizing to prevent it in the future. The proprietors of the heeling machine patent claim that their patent has five more years to run, while the manufacturers claim that the time has already expired. The matter is to be tested in the courts, and the best legal counsel in the country, conversant with patents, will be employed on both sides. The manufacturers have appointed a committee of three of their number, Mr. George B. Brigham of Westboro, being one of them, to engage counsel and arrange for the great battle of the legal lights which is sure to follow, as millions are involved in it. The royalty required is one-half cent per pair of boots or shoes, which is a source of immense yearly income to the proprietors of the heeling machine.

Newspaper Reporters.

This is the Hon. Carl Schurz's opinion of newspaper men, as ventilated in Pittsburg a few days ago:

You hear from the people, from one end of the country to the other, growling at the newspaper reporters, and I want you to publish what I tell you now. The newspaper reporters of the country should be respected. Throughout my whole public career, and since that time, I have never changed my mind in regard to them. They are the guardians of truth and personal liberty. They protect every citizen, and I have to see the first case where a newspaper man wilfully attempted to deprive any man of his rights. I will never be satisfied till I see newspaper men raised entirely on a level with, if not above, the other professions, for they deserve the greatest consideration. I have never yet refused an interview unless I couldn't help doing so, and I find I am treated with fairness and justness in all reports."

Magazines.

The October number of the American Magazine is strong in poems, notably those by Hamlin Garland, Kate Putnam Osgood, George Edgar Montgomery, Laura F. Hindle, and Maurice Thompson; the last named contributing an address to the Grand Army of the Republic, that will stir the blood of patriots, whether they once wore the blue or the gray.

SCHNEIDER'S MAGAZINE for October has for its leading article a richly illustrated description of "The Paris School of Fine Arts," by Henry O. Avery, who is a graduate of that institution, and therefore writes from abundant knowledge and with true appreciation. The article describes the architectural beauties of the buildings, and gives an interesting insight into the methods of instruction. The illustrations were made from the handsome photographs of the buildings, which are exclusively made by the French Government.

BABYHOOD. The subject of a training school for children's nurses is broached in the October Babyhood, it being claimed that there would be no lack of employment of such, at good salaries. Such a movement ought certainly to be a success, and would open an avenue of honorable and extremely useful occupation to a large class.

GOOD HOUSEKEEPING. With the first number of Vol. VI. of Springfield, Mass., Good Housekeeping will begin a new Serial which has been prepared with much care and study by Mrs. Hester M. Poole, a practical housekeeper and thinker, and one of the most competent writers of our time on household affairs.

The publishers will send to all new subscribers Good Housekeeping from November 12th, 1887, (the beginning of Vol. VI.), to January 1st, 1889, fourteen months, for a single year's subscription—$2.50. Such subscriptions must be received before January 1st, 1888.

The American edition of the Illustrated London News for Sept. 24th is not only a very handsome but an exceedingly instructive number. Its excellent representations and descriptions of foreign scenes makes it most valuable as an educator and entertainer. For sale by all dealers; price 10 cents. The Illustrated News Co., N. Y.

The Worcester Telegram says that if the third party Prohibitionists "had one-half the zeal for solid work that their noisy professions indicate, they can carry two-thirds of the Republican caucuses in Massachusetts for temperance candidates and measures. They don't want to accomplish that. They just want to howl and smash things."

The pension rolls contains the names of 18,131 citizens of Massachusetts, to whom $80,862 is paid quarterly, an average income of $131.46.

From the Braintree Observer

The Double Taxation Act.

It is worthy of notice the effect that the "Double Taxation Act," has had on personal property in Braintree, and the consequent loss to the town. In 1882, the year in which the act was passed, the value of assessable property as shown by the assessors' books amounted to $1,013,150; in 1883, to $804,675; in 1884, to $778,850; in 1885, to $732,975; in 1886, to $734,950; and the present year to $725,850.

The Quincy Patriot.

SUPPLEMENT.

SATURDAY, OCT. 8, 1887.

A Crank.

Rev. W. F. Davis of Boston seems to be a crank who seeks notoriety, as is common with the species. By going to the city hall, Boston, and asking for it he could have a license to preach on the Common any Sunday, but he prefers to break the city ordinances and preach without leave from the authorities, claiming that no body of men have a right to prevent him. He might as well claim that he has a right to preach in the common council room without leave. He was brought before the municipal court and fined, but appealed, and refused to give bail, and after some time in jail, his case was heard in the criminal term of the Superior court last week. Mr. Davis objected to be tried by any jury on which there was a Freemason, and offered to read from a pamphlet that their oath precluded them giving an impartial verdict where the accused was not of their order, but the judge would hear none of that nonsense. He also claimed that Jehovah was his counsel, but perhaps it will prove a delusion today, when the case goes to the jury. But he probably has got what he wanted, notoriety.—Newburyport Herald.

More Honesty.

The Boston Globe has been working out a problem in journalism and arrived at an answer. It concludes that owing to the great prosperity of the Globe and other big dailies, the country weekly is bound to disappear unless it sticks closely to local topics, and even then its destiny is dubious. The Globe need have no fears about the country press. It has a reason d'etre, and an influence. There is too much independence, conscience, public spirit, foresight and sagacity in the New England country press to be dispensed with. People do not care to be forever reading of scandals, prize fights, crimes and political gossip, and, therefore, turn to the country press for relief. If there is less brilliancy there is more honesty and not so much froth. The Globe is a great newspaper after its kind, but its sphere is not the earth. Marblehead Messenger.

Vanderbilt Cottage.

The firm of McNeil Brothers, have the contract for the entire construction of the magnificent residence to be built for F. W. Vanderbilt at "Rough Point," Newport. This will be one of the largest and finest private residences yet built this side of the water. The site is one which affords both extensive land and ocean views. The building was begun in July, and will require some two years or more in construction, and its cost will be among the hundreds of thousands.

Why they were called Baptists.

The following libel upon an excellent denomination is so good that even the sternest elder, will have to join in the laugh.

A Baptist minister fishing near Cape Cod catches a strange fish, and asks of the skipper: "What manner of fish is this, my good man? It has a curious appearance."

"Yass! Only been round here this year."

"What do you call it?"

"We calls 'em Baptists."

"Why so?"

"Cause they spile so quick arter they come out of the water."—Good Cheer.

CITY TAX RATES. The tax rates of the different cities so far as heard from are as follows: Boston, $13.40; Cambridge, $16; Chelsea, $17.60; Haverhill, $16.50; Lawrence, $17.80; Lowell, $15.70; Lynn, $18.80; Malden, $14.50; Newburyport, $16.50; Newton, $15.80; Northampton, $14; Salem, $16; Somerville, $14.80; Waltham, $14.50; Brockton, $16.63 2-3. That of Quincy is $15.80.

The Toronto Globe does not like it that Canada should be made an asylum for American defaulters and like criminals, and suggests that even kidnapping them on the part of American officials would be winked at, and is of opinion that if the Dominion had the treaty making power an extradition treaty with the United States would be negotiated which would rid their country of these criminals. It is a summation devoutly to be wished.

"Give us this day our daily bread,"—but let it be bread as nature and nature's God intended it should be. Wheat is in itself capable of sustaining the human body, as it contains all the life-giving elements needed. Man has invented the modern flour, by taking out of ground wheat nearly all the phosphates, which are the nourishing ingredients, and so has impoverished our principle article of diet by giving us starch bread. The celebrated ARLINGTON WHEAT MEAL is the whole grain of the choicest selected white wheat, thoroughly cleaned and ground with great care and it ought to be a part of every person's daily consumption.

There is considerable Puritanism left in New England when a Unitarian clergyman is forced to resign his pastorate in consequence of his marriage to a divorced woman. And this in Newport.

Be Kind to Your Piano.

Nothing puts even a fine instrument out of tune sooner than a damp atmosphere. Musicians consider the best tones abide in a piano kept from contact with the wall, especially an outer wall.

It should by all means be kept in a dry atmosphere, though not too near a fire, or with the sun shining upon it, nor yet exposed to draughts. A well-made instrument will hold its own long and well, if used with discretion and carefulness.

When not in use the lid ought always to be closed, although the keys are ornamental, and the temptation is to leave it open for giving the room a home-like aspect. When it is to stand for a period closed, a piece of camphor gum within will protect from moths. The best covering for protection is of fleecy linen rubber.

Wool vs. Red Hair.

"My name is Moses Smith," said a very black man as he put his head into the general delivery window at the post-office yesterday.

"No letter for you," was the reply, "I didn't 'spect one, miss. I've got one heah I want to put back. I've opened it, an' it can't be fur me."

"Have you read it?"

"I dun had Barber Jim read it to me. I'spected it was a letter from my wife."

"And it isn't?"

"No, ma'am. Dar's a lock of ha'r inside, real red ha'r. De pusson who wrote it says it ar' a lock of baby's ha'r, an' dat baby cries for me."

"And it can't be for you?"

"How kin it, ma'am? Jist compare de ha'r an' see if it kin! 'Deed, ma'am, dat's fur some odder Moses Smith—some white feller."

Straining Water for Gold.

"Would you believe it," said an engraver of gold watch cases, "that the water in which I wash my face and hands every evening just before leaving the shop is kept by my employers and afterward strained through a sieve? It seems incredible, still it is a fact. Otherwise the firm would lose a valuable amount of gold.

You see, the specks of gold that we clip off fasten themselves to our hands and faces and sometimes fly into our hair or fall to our aprons. In a shop containing a big corps of engravers the amount which thus sprinkles the workman reaches a high value in a few days.

The water in which our aprons are washed is strained in the same way. Our aprons are furnished us by the firm, we are never permitted to take them out of the shop. My employers thus save fully $2,000 a year.—New York Sun.

Death of a Centenarian.

Mrs. Lucy Luther, died in Hadlyme, Ct., Sept. 29th. She was 103 years, 9 months of age. Her intellectual faculties remained unimpaired till the last. She was remarkably active up to her last sickness, and for over 75 years has occupied the same house.

Will Cover Eight Lots.

The biggest braid factory in the United States is being built by Schloss & Sons of New York. G. F. White, 88 Hawley street, their Boston representative, reports that the building will cover eight city lots, and will include a main structure three stories high, weaving and drying departments, with several annexes. The entire establishment will be heated by steam and lighted by incandescent electricity.

Biggest on Earth.

A pair of oxen raised in Caledonia county that measured ten feet in girth, actually weigh over 7000 pounds and probably the biggest yoke of oxen in the world, were on exhibition at the Maine State fair last week. It cost $1000 to raise them to their great weight.

SMART MAN. Reuben R. Thrull of Rutland, aged 93 years, is in attendance upon the Rutland County, Me., Court, now in session, looking after some old cases on the docket. He is probably the oldest practicing attorney in the world.

SUMMARY OF NEWS.

The wheat crop of Oregon is the largest ever known.

There are one hundred Baptist periodicals in the United States.

In Ceylon the Protestant Christians of all sects are together estimated at 35,000.

Three thousand men are working on the Canadian Pacific snowsheds. They have been working ever since spring and are now nearly through.

The galleries of the Pension Office in Washington are two-thirds of a mile in length, and it cost nine hundred thousand dollars.

Portland, Oregon, expects soon to have a million dollar hotel.

Counterfeit postage stamps have been in use.

Isaac Jeans, a Philadelphia Quaker, who has made a fortune of $3,000,000 as a fruit importer, began his business career by selling oranges and apples at retail.

Vienna has granted to the niece of Mozart, who is penniless, the princely pension of $1.25 a month. Evidently the country thinks a great deal of her, and is afraid she will emigrate if she gets a bigger allowance.

A man was heavily fined last week for using profane language on the last train from Boston, Saturday evening. If he had lost the last train some allowance might have been made.

President Cleveland engaged a special train for his Western and Southern trip, at an estimated cost of at least $10,000.

Glen Rose Farm.

We find in the Braintree Observer, the following account of an excellent farm owned by Mr. Kendall, on Quincy avenue, Braintree, about one mile from the Quincy line:

Situated within the limits of East Braintree, extending from Quincy avenue to the river, comprising 60 1/2 acres, is at present a most attractive place, and few people in the town are aware of what has been and is being done there.

Since its purchase by the present proprietor, Mr. James S. Kendall, the farm has undergone as it were, a transformation scene, and although Mr. Wyman, the former owner, did much to improve and beautify its hills and valleys, expending thousands of dollars, and displaying good taste and judgment in all his arrangements of drives and walks; his arbors and clusters of forest trees; his gardens, orchards and fountains; the present proprietor eclipses the work of the former, giving to the landscape artist the variety and beauty he admires; to the agriculturalist some lessons and results in his favorite branch of science; to the pomologist and the botanist a feast of their love of fruits and flowers; and to the public spirited citizen an example and a stimulus to do his duty as God has given him gifts in this direction.

Standing upon the highest point which overlooks the farm, the prospect around us is superlatively grand. Eastward, the bay with its islands, the beach and the limitless ocean beyond. North, the city and suburban towns between us. Westward, the beautiful Blue Hills, looking like foundations for God's firmament, all forming a picture scarcely equalled, and nowhere excelled. Truly did William Wyman once remark "he had travelled over nearly the whole of our country, and did not know of a place that combined so great a variety of natural and picturesque beauty as this spot."

But leave our ideal farm and take up the practical work of the season. Mr. Kendall employs during the spring and summer months 20 men on an average, under the general superintendence of Mr. Queensy. His crops have been hay; corn 7 acres; potatoes 12 acres; vegetables for market and stock 12 acres. He has raised many tons of squash and pumpkin, besides much fodder and grain.

His grapery, nursery, and flower garden under the care of Mr. Edward M. Wight produce some splendid specimens after their kind. This branch is to be largely increased the coming year, the work being now in progress. His two green houses are fitted up with all the latest improvements and conveniences and are as near perfection as the skill of the florist has invented.

His stock is of pure blood and high grade Jersey. He has two full blooded Jersey bulls, one imported; in all twenty-four head of cows and heifers. Evidently he is not a Hebrew in his religious belief as he keeps some thirty fine swine. There is an extensive poultry house and yards well filled with choice fowl. We fail to discover any goats or any thistles on the farm to feed them, hence the reason, but all the animals were of that kind, either useful to man or affectionate in their nature.

He understands one great secret to successful farming, high cultivation; to this end he has built a wharf where he has manure brought from the city in vessels saving thereby much expense in transportation. As fast as the land is thoroughly cultivated he seeds it to grass; and by this system land which a few years ago was a jungle of thorns and briars will soon be made to blossom as the rose.

He has built, and has now nearly completed, one of the best barns in this county. Messrs. Hayward Bros., may well be proud of the planning and workmanship thereof. The dimensions are 80 feet by 44. A cellar under the whole, built in the most substantial manner by Mr. Judah A. Loring. This barn will be used entirely for storage of hay and horses, with a room for his coachman. The grounds around it are now being cleared and concrete roads leading to it built by Mr. Gutterson.

The question seems to be not where can I pinch and save a dollar's expense, but where, and in what way, will a dollar expended do the most good, and yield the most profit. Many years may he live to enjoy the fruit of his labors, and, may the people of the town of Braintree, learn to appreciate such gentlemen and treat them with that courtesy and consideration of which they are worthy.

E. A. N.

A man was heavily fined last week for using profane language on the last train from Boston, Saturday evening. If he had lost the last train some allowance might have been made.

Street Railway Hearing.

The Selectmen of Quincy heard on Wednesday the petition of H. M. Federhen and others for a location for the proposed Quincy Street Railway, being substantially the same petition recently presented to the Board Commissioners. Selectmen Eaton was the only member of the board not present.

H. M. Federhen, Fred H. Smith, J. F. Merrill and W. F. Lunt appeared for the company, while there were also present a representative of the Van Depoele electric railway system; Road Commissioners Dugan, and a representative of the PATRIOT.

A civil engineer's plan of the proposed route and its grade was shown. Mr. Federhen said the company desired a safe location on all streets except Hancock and School, where it was proposed to run the centre and pavements of the and street in independent sides. The side of the street was preferable because then poles would be needed only on that side of the street, and would be less obstructive and less expensive. The operating wire must be below all wires now in the streets, but not necessarily at a uniform height. The rail as now constructed had been recommended by other companies and was believed to be the best; it would not be so much above ground as where put in other roads in the past. The report from Scranton, Penn., was very satisfactory.

The Selectmen made some objection to running on the side of narrow streets, and asked many questions relative to the use of electricity, the running of horses, stopping the cars, etc., all of which seemed to be answered satisfactorily. The two questions for the Selectmen were—"The granting of the location," and "whether permission should be given to use an electricity." The board took the matter under advisement and it is hoped that it will make an early report.

Sixty-Five Years Married.

It was our pleasure the first of the week to spend an afternoon with an aged couple living on Washington street, who have gained the distinction, we believe, of having been married more years than any other couple in the town of Quincy. Mr. and Mrs. Paul Wild were united in wedlock in Quincy, by the late Rev. Peter Whitney, Oct. 10, 1822, and consequently on Monday they reached their 65th anniversary of "double blessedness."

The Jennie Cale troupe closed their engagement here last Saturday evening. They presented their plays in good shape and won many friends.

At the Congregational Church tomorrow the pastor will preach in the morning, and in the evening will give Lecture Room Talk upon the Lord's Prayer No. 5.

Mr. Wild was born in Duxbury, on what is now Library street, March 25, 1800, and was the youngest of seven children, three sons and four daughters, of Paul and Rachel (Thayer) Wild. He attended the common school of his native town, and when about fifteen years of age came to Quincy, and commenced business, Mr. William Baxter. In a year or two he entered business for himself, retailing meat in the neighboring towns. He made daily trips to Boston and for many years was a frequent visitor to the Boston Bazaar market. When the Quincy market was opened he secured stall five and it is a source of great pride to him, that it was his privilege to sell the first quarter of mutton in the market. In order to do this, however, he sold under price, obtaining but sixty cents when the market price was seventy-five (meat was cheaper then). He retired several years ago from the market business, but has kept busy farming. He never took an active part in politics or held offices, but is always ready to vote, and generally with the Federal and Republicans.

Mrs. Ann (Baxter) Wild is a native of Quincy, being born on School street. She was the sixth of seven children of the late Samuel and Abigail (Newcomen) Baxter. During five years of her childhood she lived on Poddocks Island, attending school at Hull. But five years were enough for her parents on this island, and they returned to School street, where Miss Ann then a lass of eighteen was married. She is one of those ladies who never frets or worries, but is always good natured and pleasant and enjoys life, and has made Mr. Wild a helpful and agreeable wife.

Mr. and Mrs. Wild began married life in a house that formerly stood on School street, or as it was then called "the road to the mill." Before three years however they moved into their present pleasant home, then new. Mr. Wild's possessions once embraced all of what is now Edwards Hill, but twelve acres is the extent of his present home. From the front windows of the house the main channel of Boston water is visible and a good view is taken delight in watching the ships. They have never been blessed with children, but have a host of relatives and acquaintances who delight to accept the hospitalities so freely extended.

We are in hopes to present the pictures of our aged friends in connection with this sketch, but they had no likenesses from which to work, in fact Mr. Wild told us he always runs his horse by photographers. In the corner of their living room stands the veritable "grandfather's clock" being once the property of Mr. Wild's grandfather; it keeps perfect time, but the time is its age. In comparison with the clock to-day Mr. Wild says honest folks lived when that clock was made. A large family Bible, Mrs. Ann Wild by her mother in 1818, is a constant companion, being read daily. Both Mr. and Mrs. Wild can read with glasses. The former is about his estate nearly every day, while the latter knits and sews. Two or three years ago before Mrs. Wild became disabled it is told they kept a man and girl, but it was their invariable custom to rise at four o'clock and breakfast before five, and before the help were astir. Now they are kindly cared for by Mrs. Augusta Curtis.

In respect to their nephew, the late George L. Baxter, who was buried Monday, Mr. and Mrs. Wild did not observe their sixtieth anniversary, but they promise to live until their diamond anniversary, and such is the sincere wish of the Patriot.

ABOUT. About 7 p. m. Wednesday a buggy, Boston bound, dashed through the Square at a reckless speed, seeming to take the whole road. As a result when opposite Saville street, the carriage collided with one driven by Mrs. Charles H. Davis, throwing the occupants of both out, and all the members were present. The hours for conference business are from 9 to 11 A. M. and from 3 to 5 p. m. Services are to be held every evening at 7.45 in the Grand Army Hall.

DECEASED. Cotton Centre Johnson, for many years identified with the apothecary business in Quincy, during active business life, died Thursday evening of consumption. He was first located in the Roberton House, and was afterwards in partnership with Mr. Joseph S. Whall.

TIERRIL'S BEST. Thursday afternoon Mr. Joseph Robertson, proprietor of the Roberton House, Quincy, and Creighton House, Boston, was surprised at his Squantum farm by boarders of the Creighton and in all about fifty friends. Among the number were ex-Constable Fred H. French, who was a postman at the time of his death. He was also served one year as an assessor of Quincy.

CONFERENCE. The Swedish conference was opened on Wednesday at 1 o'clock by the singing of "Rock of ages claim for me," etc., and a prayer by the president, Rev. H. Olson from New York. The Rev. Cederberg from Providence was elected as secretary. The roll was called and all the members were present. The hours for conference business are from 9 to 11 A. M. and from 3 to 5 p. m. Services are to be held every evening at 7.45 in the Grand Army Hall.

QUINCY POINT.

HARVEST FESTIVAL.

The "Harvest Festival" held Wednesday evening, by the Ladies' Aid Society of the Congregational Church, was a grand success. The evening was all that could be desired, and the vestry was completely filled. The old fashioned supper at six o'clock was excellent; the ladies never fail to make this portion of the Soiree had as an object in arranging for the entertainment, that a sandwich should be made on the new piano, just purchased by Bourne & Son of Boston. This was used for the first time on this occasion, and promises to give good satisfaction. The entertainment commenced at 8 o'clock, and consisted of a recitation by Mrs. T. B. Pollard; readings by Miss S. Augusta Arnold, who had kindly consented to aid in making the entertainment a success. Miss Arnold has a highly cultivated contralto voice, of unusual richness and power, and sang several selections in grand style. The audience was exceedingly attentive and appreciative, and expressed their pleasure in repeated encores.

Michael S. Sullivan of Quincy had a restoration and release of his pension. C. T. Reed has returned to Quincy and is prepared to receive pupils, for the organ or piano.

The Quincy Water Company is making good progress on its retaining reservoir in Braintree.

Foster C. Banister the new proprietor of the Quincy House has been granted an inholder's license.

A prominent member of the city committee says the charter will be taken up again for action soon.

If the people of Quincy want evening schools they must agitate the subject, and secure an appropriation.

Services at Town Temple tomorrow morning at 10:30; Sunday School at 11:45; Evening service at 7 o'clock.

Miss L. Young of Quincy was on Tuesday evening confirmed as third assistant of the Van Depoele electric railway system; Road Commissioners Dugan, and a representative of the PATRIOT.

A civil engineer's plan of the proposed route and its grade was shown. Mr. Federhen said the company desired a safe location on all streets except Hancock and School, where it was proposed to run the centre and pavements of the and street in independent sides. The side of the street was preferable because then poles would be needed only on that side of the street, and would be less obstructive and less expensive. The operating wire must be below all wires now in the streets, but not necessarily at a uniform height. The rail as now constructed had been recommended by other companies and was believed to be the best; it would not be so much above ground as where put in other roads in the past. The report from Scranton, Penn., was very satisfactory.

Mr. Arnold has spent some eight years, now, in the study of music, and the cultivation of her voice and has received the bronze, silver and gold medals, at the London Academy of Music. She sings today by the steamship from New York to London, to be absent about two months, returning again in December.

The harvest display of fruits and vegetables excited much praise, and was a handsome sight, none but the finest specimens were to be found on the tables, and these were auctioned off as close to the festivities of the evening. The ladies feel that they may congratulate themselves on the first entertainment of the season, and now have courage to arrange a further grand program for the winter.

KEEPING FRUIT.

The great secret for preventing decay in fruit through autumn and winter, is to preserve a uniformly low temperature. If changing and fluctuating, they quickly rot.

Circumstances of air are bad, because they make changes in temperature. We find that apples keep longer in winter by merely wrapping each specimen in tissue paper and thus excluding air. Hence the advantage of packing in any soft, powdered substance, as dry sawdust, bran, ground potato, or bedding in moss. On a large scale this can be done, and large barrel rooms may be used, to hold and keep winter changes of air. Much can be accomplished by ventilating windows, admitting cold air in the night, and excluding warm air in the day time by closing them. These remarks apply more particularly to apples and pears, and also to grapes. They would also apply to small and perishable fruits, if it were an object to keep them, but the common practice is to consume them while fresh.—Country Gentleman.

CANNED FRUIT.

little water, stir carefully; when well heated

BOSTON MUSEUM.

"SOPHIA," an adaptation of Fielding's celebrated romance, "Tom Jones," by Mr.
Robert Buchanan, will be produced at the Boston Museum, Oct. 17th, with new and beautiful scenery, elaborate appointments, and an exceptionally fine cast.

MISS CHARLOTTE COOPER, Mrs. W.
Alfred Hudson, Edgar L. Davenport, J.
Nolan, J. Burroughs, C. E. Boardman and William Seymour; and Misses Annie Clark, Isabelle Eversom, May Davenport,
Helen Dayne and Mrs. M. A. Farren.

"SOPHIA" is a charming pastoral comedy of English life and manners in the eighteenth century, and abounds in strong situations wherein humor and pathos are most happily blended. The following note by the author of the play will be of interest:

"Although the leading characters and incidents of this comedy are based upon the greatest work of our first and greatest satirical novelist, care has been taken to show only what is perfectly stainless and void of offence. Despite a certain taint, which was coarseness rather than immorality,
"Tom Jones" has gained its immorality as a work of art because it is a marvelously right and pure in its marvelous picture of human nature. He who discovers in it any taint of immorality will have to seek it in the comedy of Cervantes and Dryden. Such a search for more imperfections would, I believe, utterly miss the breezy freshness, the masterly satire, the noble love of truth and justice which are the great book's particular charm."

"SOPHIA" will be presented every evening and Wednesday and Saturday matinees.
Attention is called to the "change of time," which will take place on Oct. 17th. On and after that date the performance will commence at 7.45 o'clock, instead of 8, as heretofore.

SUPPLEMENT.

The Quincy Patriot.

SATURDAY, OCT. 15, 1857.

The Presidential Term.

Mexico is about to complete the adoption of an amendment to the federal constitution for permitting the reelection of the president of the republic for a second term. Two-thirds of the States have adopted the amendment, which will be ratified by congress, as is necessary under the Mexican form of amending that instrument. It is done to meet an exigency, as is often the case in the enactment of laws, whether good or bad. The present incumbent of the presidency is not only popular, but he is generally conceded to be eminently fitted for the office, and it is desirable that he should be reelected under the conditions which exist in that country. The constitution, however, stood in the way, as it forbade the reelection of a president for a term immediately succeeding that of service in the office. It must have been considered very necessary that President Diaz should continue to administer the government, when it was deemed of such importance as to justify the resort to such an extraordinary measure as an amendment to the constitution to render it practicable.

It is a good thing to learn from the experience of one's neighbors. It has often been proposed to make an amendment to our own federal constitution in the opposite direction and make our presidents ineligible as immediate successors of themselves. This has often been coupled with the proposition to extend the presidential term to seven years. This has been proposed by several presidents of the United States, but it has been at the beginning of their terms when they announced a theory taken from outside observation, while experience in the office has almost universally led them to the opinion that one term was too short to make a sufficient record, and that a reelection was desirable as giving the stamp of approval on the part of the people of the work of the administration. If the president is ineligible for reelection there is no test whether his administration is approved, and the office is made an exception to all others, in which the prize of good service is continuance in the same, or promotion to some higher elective office.

With Head to the North.

The superstition that human beings should sleep with their heads to the north is believed by the French to have for its foundation a scientific fact. They affirm that each human system is in itself an electric battery, the head being one of the electrodes, the feet the other. Their proof was discovered from experiments which the Academy of Sciences was allowed to make on the body of a man who was guillotined. This was taken the instant it fell and placed upon a pivot free to move as it might. The head part, after a little vacillation, turned to the north, and the body then remained stationary. It was turned half way round by one of the professors, and again the head end of the trunk moved slowly to the cardinal point due north, the same results being repeated until the final arrestation of organic movement.—New York Star.

Co-operative Banks.

The system of co-operative banks has recently grown rapidly into favor. In New Jersey their assets have increased from $7,000,000 to over $9,300,000 in the last two years, and from $2,512,335 to $3,229,072 in Massachusetts in one year, and equally rapid growth is reported in Pennsylvania, Ohio, Minnesota, and some other states.

October 31, 1856, there were 156 of these associations in New Jersey, with 37,750 depositors, of which nearly two-thirds were wage earners. Eight thousand, five hundred and sixty-two families by borrowing of these banks were fast paying for their homes. Mr. M. J. Brown of Philadelphia, the best authority on the subject in his state, reports 1,500 banks in Philadelphia. It, as he thinks, the same average holds for all as for 120 banks personally examined there are in the entire 1,500 assets of $109,336,725 owned by over a million depositors and borrowed by over 60,000, representing, with their families, over 300,000 persons, who are thus able to build and pay for homes which they would, without these invaluable banks have been forced to rent.

Not Excused.

When I was a young man I spent several years in the South, residing for a while at Port Gibson, on the Mississippi river. A good deal of litigation was going on there about that time, and it was not always an easy matter to obtain a jury. One day I was summoned to act in that capacity, and reported to court to get excused. On my name being called out I informed the Honorable Judge that I was not a freeholder, and was therefore not qualified to serve. "I am stopping for the time being at this place."

People are apt to see the evils of the condition under which they live, and to believe that any other is preferable, so that while we have been considering the advisability of one term, the Mexicans, who had tried it, have abandoned the system and adopted our own. It is, in any view of the case an unnecessary tying of our own hands. If at any time the people do not want a president for a second term it is very easy for them to prevent it, and if it should come about that the welfare, and even the safety of the country, depended upon extending his administration beyond one term, it would be very awkward and inconvenient to be met with a constitutional provision. For instance, the reelection of President Lincoln was extremely desirable, and was at great advantage notwithstanding that his assassination followed in but little more than a month from the time of his second inauguration.—Newburyport Herald.

Solid Beverage Demanded.

In the very hottest part of an afternoon a son of Erin entered a Woodward avenue drug store and called for a glass of soda water.

"What syrup will you have?" asked the clerk.

"Limon an' lots av it," he said. The order was filled, but as the foaming glass was set on the counter the customer stood looking at it critically, and made no sign of taking it.

"Drink it," said the clerk; "drink it before it spoils."

"Just you keep your coat on, me young man, an' I'll take me time, by your leave," was the answer.

He waited until the beverage was perfectly flat and then said:

"Now just you look at that! The glass ain't half full. I'll have you understand you can't do me out o' my dhrink by ginin' me a lot o' foam. Now you fill that up, me daisy an' dhraw it slow!"

The clerk complied and the purchaser drinking the mixture, departed apparently satisfied.—Free Press.

IN LUCK. A fortunate man in Newbury, N. Y., rented a house down town, thirty years ago, for $135 annually, with the stipulation that the rent should remain the same so long as the tenant retained it. He still lives there and the landlord continues to keep his word.

A stick of timber 151 feet long, and 20x20 inches in thickness is sent from Puget Sound to the Mechanics' exhibition at San Francisco. It is probably the longest piece of lumber ever produced by a saw mill.

Floral Hints.

Many who lift plants have an eye more to the top than to the root, and hence make bad work of the job. With the roots mutilated and insufficient, the part above the ground will soon reach a sorry condition, with the leaves turning yellow or flabby and in many instances dropping off. With an abundance of roots, and the plants relieved of excessive growth by pruning, the grower may expect soon to produce a handsome plant.

To turn or not to turn the window plants is a common question at this season of taking in stock. For the soft-wooded class, that includes geraniums, fuchsias and the like, turning is not advisable, for it causes them to execute a right-about face manoeuvre that has a weakening tendency upon plants, soon showing itself in a vigorous, ragged look. Better to have health and vigor, with one-sidedness, than weakness of growth and something like symmetry of form. Bulbous plants, cactuses, and those with narrow or hard leaves, are less liable to injury from frequent turning than most other plants.

Firm potting is important in the case of hard-wooded plants. When the shift is made the earth should be thoroughly rammed with the square end of a level or similar potting stick. A good gardener once remarked firm ramming was necessary for fine bushes.

Taking up plants for wintering over will call for activity now. Kinds in bloom all summer to have at least one-third of the top removed. Others specially prepared for winter blooming by having had the flower buds removed and the tips cut back will need little or no pruning. Place a high value on every root to save it. To do this lift large balls of earth and reduce with a pointed stick to a size suitable for potting. It is best to work with rather small pots, using good fine loam. This should be well firmed between the ball of earth and the pot. After potting, the plants should have one thorough watering and rather close shade, with frequent (say every two hours) light sprinklings of the foliage. This to be kept up for a week, after which give more light and space between them, but not full sunlight yet for several weeks.

Effects of Tea Tasting.

"Ten years ago only one store in a hundred had what is known as a tea taster; now there is no tea house of any importance whatever which has not in one of its employees a good tea taster," said a large wholesale tea dealer. "A thousand chests of tea will be received; the tea taster then gets in his work. A little tea is taken and put in a scale; just enough to balance a five cent piece. It is then placed in cups and boiling water is poured over the tea. The taster then takes a sip from each cup and writes down on a piece of paper his idea of its worth.

"No two tasters, however, agree to the value of tea, especially the black Oolong, which is mostly drunk in this city."

"Does the tea have any injurious effect on the taster?"

"Sometimes he will get hold of a positively rank grade, and then he will spit it out as soon as he can. Frequent tasting often makes a man very nervous, and most of these men soon acquire a positive dislike for tea and drink nothing but coffee.

There are connoisseurs of tea as well as whiskey."—Philadelphia News.

A Great Privilege.

"It ain't ev'rybody I'd put to sleep in this room," said old Mrs. Jinks to the fastidious and extremely nervous young minister who was spending his first night in B—, at her house.

"This here room is full of sacred associations to me," she went on; "my first husband died in that bed with his head on them very pillars, and poor Mr. Jinks died settin' right in that very chair in the corner. Sometimes when I come into the room in the dark I think I see him settin' there still."

"My own father died layin' right on that lounge under the winder. Poor pa! He was a Spiritualist, and he alius said he'd appear in this room again after he died; and sometimes I'm foolish enough to look for him. If you should see anything of him tonight, you'd better not tell me; for it'd be a sign to me that there was something in Spiritualism, and I'd hate to think that."

"My son by my first man fell dead of heart disease right where you stand. He was a doctor, and there's two whole skeletons in that closet that belonged to him; and half-a-dozen skulls in that lower drawer."

"Well, good-night, and pleasant dreams."

SUPPLEMENT.

SATURDAY, OCT. 15, 1887.

Is it not Singular?

People let their angry passions rise more over what they believe without evidence than what they know on proof. A man has written a book in which he attempts to prove that the commonly accepted theory that the earth is a globe which revolves on its own axis daily, and has an annual revolution about the sun is all a mistake, that the earth is a level plain, and that the sun, the moon and the stars daily come up and pass across the sky from the east to the west, and he really makes a very interesting argument. Now, the astronomers do not persecute him for his book, or denounce him as an impious wretch, nor do they even appeal to the people not to read such wicked arguments, but they simply smile at this attack upon the truth, and let it work its own way to oblivion.

In the meeting of the American Board at Springfield there was great feeling, and personal, acrimonious feeling, over the question whether there is a possibility that the heathen, who have never heard of Christ, may have a chance in the future world. During all the ages that the human race has existed no traveller has returned from that bound to which we are all tending, and whence uncounted millions have gone, to reveal to us the mystery of that great darkness, and yet men feel more passionately over questions regarding it which can never be settled in this world, than they do over any matter which touches living interests that can be definitely decided. Men have been burned and hanged for not believing about this great mystery as others believed. The most cruel and bloody wars have been fought over the dreams in regard to it, and even women and children have been murdered and tortured because their families were of the hostile sect. Manners are milder than they were, but there is still not a little of the spirit of the Inquisition, and of the St. Bartholomew massacre under the milder utterances in the discussions at Springfield. And yet, they settled nothing as to a problem which is insoluble.—Newburyport Herald.

Immoral Advertisements.

A general protest should once more be made for the protection of society against the unlicensed publication of immoral advertisements. The censorship of literature in our public libraries is very severe. The literary publics are rigidly excluded. Our young people may not read Smollett, Fielding and their confreres, but the law does not provide any means by which parents may guard their children from the accidental contact with advertising in the papers all over the country of a nature that should never be allowed. It is quite true that the laws of decency oblige the law of order to make some attempt to prevent the publication of such matter. The more respectable papers have, of their own accord, closed their columns to this sort of business, and it is necessary that the force of the law be used to oblige less scrupulous newspapers from giving place in their columns to the circulation of indecent so-called medical advertising.—Boston Home Journal.

AN EXCEPTIONAL CASE. It has been said that corporations—particularly railroad—have no souls. If this is the general rule, now and then one finds a notable exception, such as the following:

The Old Colony Railroad Company, when it heard of the sad accident at South Framingham by which Mr. William Bedford lost his life in attempting to board a car on one of its trains while the train was in motion, though entirely irresponsible for the result, at once sought for the family of the unfortunate man, and finding that there was no provision made by the deceased for them, at once assumed all the expenses attendant upon the funeral and burial, furnishing an elegant casket, etc. To those who know President Choate, General Manager Kendrick and Superintendent French, such an act on their part would not appear surprising; still, it is exceptional as railroad companies go.—Saturday Evening Gazette.

Boston & Providence R. R.

The Boston Herald recently gave an extract from the Evening Traveller in relation to a union of the Boston & Providence and Old Colony railroads, which say: "This story has been in circulation at frequent intervals for a year or more past. It has met with repeated and emphatic denials, but, in spite of all this, it is now very certain that a 'deal' is on foot which will result in the consummation, as an early date, of a lease of the Boston & Providence road to the Old Colony for a long term of years, and on a very satisfactory guarantee on the Providence stock."

The Old Colony line is constructing a steamer to run between Providence and New York and it is thought by some to point to the absorption of the Boston & Providence road by the former.—Middleboro News.

A Big Jubilee Pie.

The queen's jubilee was celebrated in a novel fashion at Derby Dale, and had it not been for the disorderly behavior of the people the event would have been a complete success. Derby Dale has for a long time been celebrated for its pies. In 1788 there was one baked in commemoration of the recovery of George III; another was baked in 1815 in honor of the peace; another in 1846 in celebration of the repeal of the Corn Laws; and now a pie has been baked which is described as unequalled in the annals of pie making. It is recorded of the last pie that it was put on a platform, which gave way, and the pie slipped to the ground; that a crowd of 15,000 people surged forward. A scramble ensued, and amid a wild state of tumult the stage was certain that the bill would pass.

NOT PROFITABLE. The scheme for opening a port on Hudson Bay for the products of Manitoba is not likely to be carried out. It was thought that for a month or two in the summer it might be sensibly felt by the taxpayers. The session has been extended by the debate over the railroad matter, and though that is important it has been needlessly prolonged by the opponents of the Hazen bill after it was certain that the bill would pass.

Something like this, but not quite so bad, occurred on Saturday. A tremendous crowd of people flocked to Derby Dale by road and rail from Bradford, and Huddersfield, Barnesley, Penistone, and the small villages within a radius of eight or nine miles of Derby. Before noon the people took up a position outside the barriers which had been erected to keep off the crush, while the old people of the village of Derby Dale and the school children of Derby, Derby Dale, and Cumberworth were being served with portions of the pie.

The baking took place in a special oven. The pie was eight feet in diameter and two feet deep, and contain 64 stones of flour, 1850 pounds of beef, 180 pounds of mutton, 160 pounds of veal, 180 pounds of lamb, 250 pounds of pork, 120 pounds of lard, 50 pounds of butter, 32 couples of rabbits, 3 hares, 42 pheasants, 40 pigeons, 12 grouse, 21 ducks, 4 plovers, 1 turkey, 5 geese, and 100 small birds, together with 30 eggs and 40 stones of potatoes, 40 pounds of beef suet, and 40 pounds of dripping. The baker was Mr. F. Workman of Halifax.

The pie weighed about 2 tons 5 cwt. In the morning it was taken on a stone cart, drawn by ten horses, to a field called Norman Park, lent for the purpose. When the pie reached the field it was taken into an enclosure and left there for inspection.

It was intended that when the old people and children had got seated Mr. Henry Brierly, the chairman of the committee, should make a little speech, but this was cut short, for directly the pie had been taken under one end of the tent in which it was to be served to the people, the crowd pressed gave way, and multitudes rushed into the tent up to the stone cart, a scene of great confusion ensuing. In vain were the people appealed to. The stronger the appeal, the more they crushed into the tent, and the pie crust rapidly disappeared, being either given or forcibly taken away. It was not until a promise had been made that when the old people and children had been served the pie should be brought into the field and distributed that the hungry mob could be appeased. In the evening there was a display of fireworks.—Manchester Eng. Times.

NO DOCTOR FOR HIM. Dr. Bartlett of Hope, Me., has lived almost entirely on bread and milk all his life, never tasted hard liquor, beer, cider, tea, coffee or tobacco, was never sick to speak of, and now at 76 "is pale and spry, and weighs over 200 pounds." He is a good republican, too, but is not so soundly orthodox in his religious views as in his politics.

It is about as difficult to convert a Mormon as a Chinaman, and it seldom occurs that one of them is more than half redeemed from the error of his ways.—Indianapolis Star.

SUMMARY OF NEWS.

DIGNITARIES. Utah is superbly stocked with Mormon church dignitaries. At present there are 400 Mormon bishops in the territory, 2,423 priests, 2,947 teachers and 6,854 deacons, and these church officials, it is said, attend strictly to business. It is about as difficult to convert a Mormon as a Chinaman, and it seldom occurs that one of them is more than half redeemed from the error of his ways.—Indianapolis Star.

From the Brantree Observer. Let's Have It.

In 1771, the town of Brantree paid Thomas Newcomb, one pound, nineteen shillings and one penny for a whipping post and stocks. In 1784, it paid Capt. Thomas Newcomb two pounds and fourteen shillings in full for erecting a pair of stocks and whipping post. One pair of these stocks and whipping post stood near the place now occupied by the pump opposite the Lyceum building. They remained there until about 1800, as a warning to evil doers, when they were removed. So tradition says.

Prisoners' Sunday occurs Oct. 30. Its observance becoming more universal among the Christian churches.

Two elderly ladies, one ninety-three and the other seventy-two, have just left Lynn for Milwaukee. They are to travel together without other escort.

Conundrums.

If I were to see you riding on a donkey, what fruit should I be reminded of? A pair.

Why is a dead doctor like a dead duck? Because they both have done quacking.

Why is an egg like a colt? Because it will not fit for use till it's broken.

What is that which a cat has, but no other animal has? Kittens.

What did Queen Elizabeth take her pills in? In cider (inside her).

If a Colt's pistol has six barrels, how many ought a horse pistol to have? Give it up.

EXPENSIVE. The governor of New Hampshire last week called the attention of the legislature to the fact that a little deficiency of between $130,000 and $140,000 in the State finances needed to be supplied on account of the prolonged session of that body, which at $83 a day for each member comes up to $1035 a day for the pay of the legislators besides the other expenses.

This is a much more considerable sum for a State of the population and resources of New Hampshire than it would be for Massachusetts, and it would be sensibly felt by the taxpayers.

The session has been extended by the debate over the railroad matter, and though that is important it has been needlessly prolonged by the opponents of the Hazen bill after it was certain that the bill would pass.

NOT PROFITABLE. The scheme for opening a port on Hudson Bay for the products of Manitoba is not likely to be carried out.

It was thought that for a month or two in the summer it might be possible to navigate the bay and make shipments to Europe. But the experience of a New Bedford whaler is discouraging to this proposition. She has lately arrived at her home port, having been frozen up in Hudson's Bay from August 8, 1880 to August 24 of the present year, which would not be profitable in case of a grain-laden ship.

The Boston Home Journal says: "A man who cannot contribute $2 a year to the support of the country that protects him, educates his children and beautifies his surroundings, may be safely classed among the incompetent whose voice would be of no good."

IMMENSE BELT. The largest leather belt ever made, or set running in New England, has just reached Boston from the factory of Mr. Samuel Kidder. It took 100 hides to make it. It is 120 feet long, and 4 inches wide, and weighs 1500 pounds.

The belt was eight feet in diameter and two feet deep, and contain 64 stones of flour, 1850 pounds of beef, 180 pounds of mutton, 160 pounds of veal, 180 pounds of lamb, 250 pounds of pork, 120 pounds of lard, 50 pounds of butter, 32 couples of rabbits, 3 hares, 42 pheasants, 40 pigeons, 12 grouse, 21 ducks, 4 plovers, 1 turkey, 5 geese, and 100 small birds, together with 30 eggs and 40 stones of potatoes, 40 pounds of beef suet, and 40 pounds of dripping. ## Could Appropriate But Not Raise.

The Situation of the Voters at the Special Town Meeting.

A neglect of the Selectmen to insert the clause "and authorize the town treasurer to borrow the same" in the articles for the special town meeting on the 14th inst., placed the 300 voters in a dilemma. The meeting was equal to it, however, although it is an open question if it did not establish a hard precedent.

Town Clerk Gill called the meeting to order, and W. G. A. Pattee was chosen moderator.

Ex-Selectman Albert Thayer immediately raised the point, which he desired the ruling of the chair, whether under the articles of incorporation, the town treasurer might be authorized to borrow money if appropriations were voted.

While the Moderator was considering the point raised, William Y. Cameron moved that the meeting dissolve.

Henry H. Faxon and George F. Pinkham opposed the motion and it was defeated by a decisive vote.

The Moderator decided that appropriations could be made under the articles, but whether the treasurer could or would borrow the same he did not feel called upon to say.

ART. 2. To see if the town will appropriate money for a chemical engine, dredge, boats, labor, and materials, the first at the Neck; or appropriate money to build cisterns at suitable places at the Neck.

Arthur Newcomb, a young gentleman residing at Quincy Neck, made an earnest plea for fire protection to his part of the town. There were sixty-four dwellings in the section, and the only protection was a local call box. The town fathers, in steamship and hook and ladder two miles away. He reviewed the late disastrous conflagration, stating that at one time $75,000 worth of property was on fire. He queried what good reservoirs would be without a company or engine. A united effort had been made to induce the Water Company to extend its pipes to the Neck but without success. Now the people were of the opinion that a chemical engine would best meet their needs, and as the town owned a centrally located lot it would not be very expensive.

Henry H. Faxon would favor some arrangement with the Water Company.

Mr. Duffield of the Neck believed the people would be satisfied if the Water Company could be induced to extend their mains. Nearly all the water would come if the streets were piped. He also reviewed the conflagration. There was no reason why the Neck which contributed in taxes with other parts of the town should not be protected in common with them.

Thophilus King believed in equal protection. He thought that if the town would agree to locate a certain number of hydrants at the Neck the company would extend its mains. This could be better done at the annual town meeting, and to bridge the master over he moved an appropriation of $300 to be spent at the discretion of the Engineers of the Fire Department, in procuring dredges, buckets, etc.

Engines Duggan opposed a motion to appropriate $300 to the Water Company.

Henry H. Faxon, who owns several wells at the Neck, said a water supply was the only way of furnishing water, as it was almost impossible to dig wells.

Jeremiah Cullinan queried the consistency of extending a four inch main, and establishing more than one hydrant on the line.

Engines Duggan answered that a four inch main would give three good streams.

J. Q. A. Field offered an amendment that a committee of three, to consist of Chief Engineer Hall, Arthur Newcomb, and Henry H. Faxon, consider the matter of a water supply, and report.

Henry H. Faxon moved a further amendment that the committee have power to consult and contract with the Water Company, not to exceed $300, which prevailed.

ART. 3. To see if the town will accept the report of the Board of Health, and cut out a town, beginning at the eastern end of Billings street and extending to Squantum street, and the town will be bounded by the street, and appropriate one hundred dollars therefor.

Ex-Selectman Thayer moved an indefinite postponement of Article 3.

Theophilus King opposed and favored an appropriation of $100.

Henry H. Faxon favored postponing until the annual meeting.

Ex-Selectman J. Q. A. Field desired the street should be accepted, but thought no appropriation at this time would be appropriate.

Voted not to indefinitely postpone.

Ex-Road Commissioner H. T. Whitman moved that the report of the Road Commission be adopted, and that they pursue the street in good condition.

Ex-Selectman G. H. Field thought an amount might be taken from the sidewalk appropriation, which was opposed by Mr. Faxon, and declared it was opposed by the moderator.

Mr. Whitman's motion prevailed.

ART. 4. To see if the town will complete the construction of Rogers street, and appropriate $100 and thirty dollars therefor.

Road Commissioner Cashman explained the situation, believing the street to be unsafe and dangerous, and $100 more was needed.

Henry H. Faxon moved that the Road Commissioners complete the work without an appropriation.

Ex-Road Commissioner Whitman and another gentleman favored the $100.

Road Commissioner Cashman added that if no money was voted it would be necessary to overrun the general appropriation.

Voted to appropriate $150.

ART. 5. To see if the town will complete the construction of the street, and appropriate two hundred and thirty dollars therefor.

Voted to indefinitely postpone.

George F. Pinkham opposed the motion.

A good wall was being put in and should be completed. It was being done at a lower contract than could be hoped for again, and besides the wall would cave in during the winter, making additional expense it is not worth.

E. Williamson endorsed the previous speaker, hoping that the work would be completed this year.

Mr. Thayer believed in censuring the Road Commissioners for having undertaken the work when they knew that they did not have half money enough. It looked to him like a small Hoax Tunnel job.

J. Q. A. Field said no one could question what the wall was an excellent one, and he would like to see it completed, but the town could not afford to do it.

George F. Pinkham opposed the motion.

A good wall was being put in and should be completed. It was being done at a lower contract than could be hoped for again, and besides the wall would cave in during the winter, making additional expense it is not worth.

E. Williamson endorsed the previous speaker, hoping that the work would be completed this year.

SUPPLEMENT.

The Quincy Patriot.

SATURDAY, OCT. 22, 1887.

PERSONAL. We copy from a paper published in San Francisco the following notice of Mr. Keating, a native of Quincy, and a son of Mrs. Jerusha Keating who resides on Water-street:

"Mr. J. P. Keating, who has a contract for making all the flour sacks used at the Golden Gate Mill of this city has been employed by Horace Davis & Co., owners of the Golden Gate, over 18 years, and has been engaged in the manufacture of flour sacks on this coast during the past 12 years. He gives his own assistance, besides superintending the work done by four young men, who run three sewing machines and a cylinder printing press, on which the sacks receive the well-known brands of the Golden Gate flour. The sack department has a capacity of 3000 sacks per day. Mr. Keating makes all the silk cloths used in the bolting department of the mill, and has charge of the Self-Rising Flour Department, where the firm manufactures large quantities of this flour, which was exhibited last year at the Mechanics' Fair. Mr. Keating had charge of the whole display made by Horace Davis & Co., and furnished a biscuit baked on the grounds from Golden Gate flour to each visitor who called at his stall."

PASSED AWAY. Capt. Caleb C. Coombs, who fell from the new Bank Building in Plymouth, Aug. 17th, died on the 7th inst, at the age of fifty-eight. He was one of early pioneers of the stone freighting, commencing when but a boy of twelve at Quincy, Mass., with his half brother Capt. Francis Locke. Afterwards removing to Cape Ann he followed the sea for thirty years, commanding for several years the steam ship Phoenix, owned by Col. Jonas H. French, of the Cape Ann Granite Company, and freighting nearly all the stone for the new Boston Postoffice. During his younger days he made a voyage around the world in the clipper ship "Flying Fish." He was also in California during the gold fever in '49 and '50 as mate of a steamboat on the Sacramento river. He leaves a large circle of friends in Gloucester where the funeral took place on Sunday Oct. 9. He was a member of Gen. Warren Commandery, United Order of the Golden Cross of Charlestown, which sent a lovely offering of flowers in form of a cross.

Railroad Passes.

The farmers cannot give any free passes, but they can do, if they will take the pains to send the right men to the legislature; they can put an end to the free pass altogether, and make it penal to give or take one. They can stop the judges and lawyers and editors and preachers and political wire-pullers from riding about the State free, at the expense of those who pay their fares. Down with the free pass, in the first place.—Rural Vermonter.

George M. Whitaker, the able editor of the New England Farmer, has the following manly reply: "We may be a little over-sensitive; but we always feel somewhat indignant when we hear editors spoken of in a way that conveys the impression that they are dead-heads, mendicants, or 'beats'; for we believe that such an impression is false and calculated to bring into disrepute one of the most important professions. The writer of this has in the course of his life had many railroad passes, but never 'a free pass.' Every ticket has been conscientiously paid for in space in his paper. The pass was no more free than the eggs and potatoes and cord wood he took in payment for subscriptions. And what is true in his case, is true in ninety-nine out of every hundred other cases. One of our exchanges recently said that 'no self-respecting editor ever applied for a pass.' That is nonsense; one might as well say that no self-respecting editor ever solicited an advertisement; for an application for a pass is really an application for an advertisement. What difference does it make whether a railroad pays for its advertising in cash or in 'truck.' Please Mr. Vermonter, don't couple respectable journalists, who pay as they go, and sometimes more than a hundred cents on a dollar, with cheap politicians, mendicant persons, subsidized judges, and the miscellaneous hordes of applicants for charity from the railroads."

LOWELL RAILROAD. The Boston and Lowell railroad and the lines which it controls and operates, passed last week into the possession of the Boston and Maine Co., under the terms of the lease made and ratified early in the summer; but no change is contemplated at present in the management of the service given to the public."

J. M. Bailey, once famous as the wit of the Danbury News, has faded from the humorous world, and is now an actor in a daily repeated domestic tragedy. His wife is insane and demands his entire attention. He must dress her and arrange her hair, and attend to all her wants. She is like a child, and he gives her all his affection, time and attention. His devotion is described as something heroic.

NEW RULES. Boston has a new set of police rules, governing street musicians, and hand-organ grinders and "needle German bands" will hereafter be obliged to play under a city license.

Cruelty on the Plains.

The enormous losses in the ranch cattle industry since last Fall direct attention to the barbarous and inhuman way in which that industry is carried on. In Montana, Wyoming, and Idaho alone 800,000 cattle starved or were frozen to death last Winter. The "Winter loss" in parts of Montana was 90 per cent. Calves were the first to die. And this is so because the ranchman usually makes no provision for feeding or sheltering his herds in Winter. The owner of 10,000 cattle may have not one shed to shield his animals from the killing winds and blinding snow storms—not one bushel of corn, not one ton of hay for their sustenance when the thin grass is covered with ice. In the warmer seasons the cattle are able to look out for themselves, but in the Winter the ranchman trusts to luck and never knows until Spring how many of his unfortunate animals have survived.—New York Witness.

Every word that has ever been written against human slavery were true, it would not make a hundredth part of the cruelty inflicted by ranchmen upon their dumb beasts on our western plains.

The bones of 800,000 starved and frozen to death last Winter now lie bleaching to the sun and perhaps calling to God for vengeance.

If this business is to go on will not some great pestilence, or other curse, come upon this nation for permitting it?

We are glad to give, without pecuniary compensation, our time, week days and Sundays, to the work of preventing cruelty, and we are glad to give such money as we can afford, but we do hope that human hearts may be stirred to add to our missionary fund, so that we can do effective work in stopping these stupendous wrongs.

We find no fault with the giving of hundreds of thousands of dollars to convert the heathen abroad, but we do need a few thousands to convert the heathen at home.

—George T. Angell.

Shame on Them.

One is almost dumbfounded at the story which comes to us from St. Paul, Minn. A committee of 150 gentlemen and their wives had been appointed a committee of reception to President Cleveland and wife. One of the ladies is wife of United States Senator and ex-Gov. C. K. Davis, but before marriage she had been a seamstress. The 149 wives decided they would not serve on the committee if Mrs. Davis were to be a member. The offending lady is refined, pleasing, used to society, of most cultivated manners, and yet the women of St. Paul will not forget she once used a needle, and earned an honest livelihood. Do they remember Millard Fillmore was once an apprenticed tailor? That Andrew Johnson used to make clothes? That Mollie was tapestry maker? That Madame Bismarck was once a washer-woman? That Catherine, once empress of Russia, was before that a camp grisette? That Eve, the mother of us all, sewed? That the grandmothers of every leading American family made the apparel for men and women, even manufactured the raw material? Shame.—Gardner Journal.

A SMART PIECE OF ADVERTISING. Mr. Charles A. Dana is a man with a big business head. When he took President Cleveland to task for finding the facts that made the basis of a portion of his speeches in the American Cyclopaedia, short-sighted people supposed he was only gratifying his animosity toward the President in the customary way. In reality, Mr. Dana had a much deeper purpose. He was aiming to advertise a book on which he had a royalty. This effort has been one of the greatest successes on record. Mr. Dana's book has been referred to in press from one end of the land to the other, and has received an attention that thousands of dollars could not pay for. The astute editor of the Sun knows how to combine business with pleasure, indeed.—Boston Herald.

ACCIDENTS. This year is remarkable for the number of accidents in the Swiss Alps. It is stated by a Swiss newspaper that the season's death roll is an unusually heavy one. In the short space of not quite a month 22 tourists met with accidents, of whom 18 were killed.

BEING REPAINTED. All lighthouses along the Pacific coast, it is stated, are being repainted, in accordance with a new regulation. The colors:—Main building and tower, white; dome, black; blinds, green, and the trimmings of the building of a lead color. The object is to have the lighthouses serve as day beacons to vessels coming from abroad.

NEW RULES. Boston has a new set of police rules, governing street musicians, and hand-organ grinders and "needle German bands" will hereafter be obliged to play under a city license.

Successful Competition.

A country's prosperity must always depend upon its power of production. Wheat is raised in Egypt, in India and America to compete in the market—England. The compensation to the laborer on the banks of the Nile is a red radish; in India, about five cents a day. In my own State, California, the harvester receives two dollars per day—forty times as much as his competitor receives in India. Now, these comparatively high wages could not be paid except upon a comparatively large production. The man in California receives forty times as much for a day's labor as a man in India; or the wages of one man in California equal those of forty men in India. And yet he competes successfully because he avails himself of the genius of inventors—cuts and threshes and puts into a sack a hundred pounds of wheat for a cent and a half.—Leland Standard.

THE PROHIBITIONISTS. We can see no reason why the Prohibitionists in town haven't as good a right to carry out their principles, and act in accordance with their opinions as any other party. We do not consider it particularly courteous, kind, or gentlemanly to hold them up to ridicule, because they are few in number, as some of our contemporaries do. It does not follow because they are in the minority that they should vote with the Republican party, a party that is more inconsistent on the temperance question than is the Democratic party, which is considered so much beneath "the party of great moral ideas." (?) We admire the independence of the Prohibitionists of this town, who have the manhood and pluck to stand right up in their boots and vote for principles every time.—Woburn Advertiser.

There is an apathy among Republicans in Massachusetts in political matters, and it would not be surprising if Lovering became governor, his popularity among the soldiers being very great.

Anarchist Club in Boston.

An anarchist club has been formally organized in Boston, which states its purpose to be "the abolition of all government imposed upon man by man, to be brought about by means of public meetings, debates, distribution of anarchistic literature and all other properganes, methods and measures." There is nothing vague or indefinite about this language. The spirit which has been the direct cause of sedition and murder in Chicago has been effectuated a lodgement in the principal city of New England. It should be vigilantly watched, and the first attempt at sedition summarily dealt with.—Milford Journal.

Boston in 1776.

In 1776 there were ten towns in Essex county that had a population larger than Boston, as follows:

Boston	2719
Newburyport	3681
Newbury	3239
Gloucester	4512
Ipswich	4508
Haverhill	2810
Beverly	2754
Amesbury	2748
Lynn	2753
Marblehead	4380
Salem	5337

Braintree, of which Quincy was a part, had a population at that time of 2871, according to "Pattie's History of Old Braintree and Quincy."

For the Patriot.

Fred. Douglas.

Most of the old Abolitionists men were engaged in the temperance movement. Fred. Douglas went to Europe to avoid the "Fugitive Slave Law;" while there he delivered temperance lectures in Dublin and Cork. His account of a visit to Father Matthew at that time was very interesting. In conclusion he says: "So entirely charmed by the goodness of this truly, good man was I, that I besought him to administer the pledge to me; he complied with promptness, and gave me a beautiful silver pledge. I now reckon myself with delight, the fifth of the last five of Father Matthew's five millions, four hundred and eighty-seven thousand, three hundred and ninety-five temperance children."

OUR PUBLIC SCHOOLS. The Marblehead Messenger says: "At the laying of the corner stone of a Roman Catholic parochial school of Middletown, Conn., on Sunday, a priest from Pawtucket preached the sermon in which he denounced the public school system of this country as heartless, heedless and godless; the common schools, he said, are schools of immorality, in which divorces originate. The next evening fourteen members of the Catholic church of Middletown met and agreed to publish a protest against the sentiments of the sermon."

RESOLVED, that we believe that Mr. Morse's well known energy and character as a public spirited citizen will materially tend to the success of the Republican ticket, and for that reason he is entitled to the support of all who believe in republican principles and the election of republican candidates.

A ballot was now taken for members of State Central Committee and with the following result:

Whole number of ballots, 27
 Necessary for a choice, 14

James T. Stevens, had 16
 H. M. Federhen, 7
 W. F. Gleason, 3
 Scattering, 1

James T. Stevens having more than the necessary number of votes was declared the nominee of the convention, which on motion of Col. Lovell was made unanimous. Mr. Vose of Hyde Park then arose and moved the following resolutions which was passed by acclamation:

RESOLVED, that the thanks of this Senatorial District are hereby presented to the Hon. Elijah A. Morse, of Canton, for the faithful and able manner in which he has performed the duties of Representative of this district in the Massachusetts Senate during the last two sessions.

RESOLVED, that we believe that Mr. Morse's well known energy and character as a public spirited citizen will materially tend to the success of the Republican ticket, and for that reason he is entitled to the support of all who believe in republican principles and the election of republican candidates.

A ballot was now taken for members of State Central Committee and with the following result:

Whole number of ballots, 27
 Necessary for a choice, 14

Warren W. Adams, had 15
 Francis A. Hobart, 11
 Scattering, 1

On motion of Mr. Hobart, the choice was made unanimous. It seems that Mr. Hobart had given it out previous to the holding of the convention that he wanted to retire from the position which he had held for eighteen years, and allow a younger man to have it, and the statement was confirmed by a number of the delegates, who said this was true. Mr. Vose moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Hobart for his faithful and valuable service to the party, which was heartily responded to.

The convention was a remarkable harmonious one.

Mr. H. A. Monk of Braintree thanked the convention, on behalf of Mr. Stevens, for the honor of the nomination, and predicted the latter's election by a handsome vote. Mr. J. T. Southworth of Holbrook denied the truth of the report that the Republicans of his town would not support a Braintree nominee. He pledged their hearty support to Mr. Stevens.

Mr. H. H. Faxon said that hard work would be needed on the part of the Republicans to elect their candidate, as the district was a close one. He would, however, do all in his power for Mr. Stevens.

THE RACES. The temperance agitation in Florida is doing much to break down race lines and unite the best elements of both blacks and whites. For the first time since emancipation, the leaders of the two races now stand shoulder to shoulder. This is good news, and indicates the manner in which the race problem at the South may be solved. As long as the people have nothing but old issues to think of, old prejudices and resentments will remain; but, change the current of thought, bring up some fresh issue, and the new, live ideas, will so crowd the old that the latter will lose their active power.—New England Farmer.

The liquor dealers in Pennsylvania have raised $200,000 to aid the Democrats in that State.

LONG TRAIN. A train said to be half a mile long recently passed over the Boston & Providence railroad. To those who were waiting for it to pass with neither end in sight, it seemed to be running on kind of a cable road.

THE YOUNGEST. Miss Mazie Coney of Boston is the youngest exhibitor in the Mechanics' fair, being 12 years of age. She exhibits a very pretty lambrequin, composed of 453 pieces. The colors are well blended and the needle work neatly executed.

THE RACES. The temperance agitation in Florida is doing much to break down race lines and unite the best elements of both blacks and whites. For the first time since emancipation, the leaders of the two races now stand shoulder to shoulder. This is good news, and indicates the manner in which the race problem at the South may be solved. As long as the people have nothing but old issues to think of, old prejudices and resentments will remain; but, change the current of thought, bring up some fresh issue, and the new, live ideas, will so crowd the old that the latter will lose their active power.—New England Farmer.

The liquor dealers in Pennsylvania have raised $200,000 to aid the Democrats in that State.

Sylvanus Cobb's Will.

Cremated.

The will of the late Sylvanus Cobb, Jr., of Hyde Park was peculiarly interesting and novel. After the widow, daughters and grandchild of the testator are comfortably provided for in accordance with the provisions of the instrument, the will goes on to state:

"And I appoint my wife, Mary Jane, sole executrix of this my last will and testament, with full powers to carry out my desires as herein expressed, according to her judgment and convenience, and she shall not be called upon to give bonds, nor shall she be hampered in any way. The efforts of her life have been united with mine in the gaining of our home, and I thus but render her what is her due. But I ask her, in the event of her marrying again, that she shall estimate the value of the property remaining in her possession derived from the provisions of the instrument, and that she will, before such marriage is consummated, give to my daughter, Ella Walt, one-third of said property. And I do set it down as my express desire that no member of my family, or relative or friend, shall for me put on at any time any outward badge of mourning. Let no blackness of crape or funeral weeds cast its gloom upon my memory. I would that my beloved ones should seek the brightest and fragrance of faith, and trust in God rather than the gloom which belongs to doubt and unrest. Add ye to go to find more light. Add ye not to the darkness who remain behind. God bless you all." —Boston Herald.

And yet the replacing of one administration by another, and this by the voluntary, conscious acts of united freemen, is one of the grandest characteristics of our institutions. Nothing like it ever takes place in other countries, and by the acts of other people. It is peculiar to our commonwealths alone. When the citizens of any one of the United States congratulates himself that he lives under the freest and most rational government in the world, he owes the ability to do so solely to the fact that his individual vote may make, or unmake, a dynasty. Take away the significant action which the individual performs at the polls, and the keystone of the arch is removed. Upon this action depends all the rest that is worth doing in our free country, and without its exercise, with some measure of intelligence in the performance, the country becomes at once the capture of monopolists, of demagogues and intriguers. —Old Colony Memorial.

Enforcing Prohibition.

The passage of a prohibitory liquor law is the beginning, not the end of a prohibition movement. With the enactment of such a law, the legal responsibility of the supporters of the measure commences. They may have had a moral responsibility before, in allowing any except prohibitory law to be in force; but they have no legal weapons for the suppression, and therefore no legal accountability for the continued sale, of intoxicating liquors. But by voting for a prohibitory law the majority have said: We can and will control and repress this great evil by such a law. The temperance men have made a bid for the chance to regulate the sale of liquor, and the voting citizens have awarded them the contract at the polls.

The enforcement of prohibition demands all the agencies required to push any measure successfully. There must be intelligent, public-spirited leaders, sufficient capital, and the qualities of courage and perseverance. Since the cause is waged in the interests of public morality, the aim of the prosecution must be above reproach. No desire for revenge, no selfish purpose, no ulterior design should prompt the action. It should be manifestly a movement begun in the interests of public well being, and directed not against men as individuals, but against them, without discrimination, as violators of the law of the land.

So managed, the law against liquor selling would be as effective as the law against any other violation of statute. The trouble is, in most localities men who vote prohibition do not care to be identified in its enforcement. Considerations of business prevent the appearance of their names on complaints and search warrants. Least of all are the majority of citizens ready to contribute any money toward the enforcement of the law, or give any extra business to the officer or any other prosecuting agent to offset the inevitable boycott from the other side. They are not willing to do anything themselves, nor raise a hand in protection of the officer who does nothing worse than enforce the law he has sworn to enforce. —Attleboro Chronicle.

SOMEWHAT PERSONAL. A humpback met a malicious one-eyed neighbor.

"Ab," said the latter, "you have your load on your back early this morning."

"Yes," responded the humpback, looking intently at the one-eyed man, "it must be rather early. I see you have only got one blind eye." —Siftags.

STRUGGLING WITH HIS MEMORY. Bobby was spending the afternoon at his aunt's, and for some moments had been gazing out of the window in a painfully thoughtful sort of a way.

"What makes you so serious, Bobby?" asked his aunt.

"Why, ma told me that I must remember not to ask for anything to eat and I'm trying to remember it." —New York Sun.

READ THIS. In speaking of a recent defalcation at the Troy postoffice, a gentleman said: "It is never safe to enclose an old bill in an envelope to be sent by mail. Why," he said, "men who are experts can tell whether a letter contains money or not simply by the sense of smell. If you will notice an old greenback, it has a peculiar smell about it that can readily be perceived, even if it be enclosed within a letter. It is better to send a registered letter or a postal note, or, if you enclose a bill, be sure it is a new one. That will not smell."

SILLY GUMPS. The morning after Mrs. Cleveland left the Palmer House in Chicago a woman offered $10 for the napkin which she had used at breakfast. Another woman desired some of the sprigs of evergreens with which the Presidential party's box at the theatre was decorated to place upon the coffin of her dead child.

A LOST OPPORTUNITY. I have read somewhere the legend of one who, day-dreaming in his chair, beheld a vision, which stood before him and beckoned him to follow her to fortune. He waited sluggishly, headed not her call nor her beckoning, until at last she grew dim and disappeared. Just as the vision faded he sprang to his feet and cried out: "Tell me who am thou art?" and received the answer, "I am an opportunity; once neglected, I never return."

The solid men of Boston make no bones of charging that the assessors have made a dishonest valuation of property in that city in many instances, and that Mayor O'Brien is to blame for it. It would not be the most surprising thing in the world if both those charges represented solid chunks of truth. —Worcester West Chronicle.

And now it is claimed that Governor Sawyer's veto of the Hazen bill is null and void, for the reason that he did not state his objections to the bill itself, as is provided in the constitution, and that five days have elapsed the bill is passed into law, and it is proposed to test the matter in the courts. Governor Sawyer gave as his reason for the veto, the manner in which the bill had passed, and stated nothing against the substance of it. —Newburyport Herald.

For California.

The Weymouth Gazette says: Mr. and Mrs. John Griffin left here last Tuesday for Santa Barbara, Cal., taking their household goods with them and intend to make that place their future home. The impaired health of Mr. Griffin, we learn, is the reason for this removal. He has acted as clerk in a leather store in Boston for several years.

Among the emigrants to California from this vicinity is a gent who facetiously states that he intends taking his 83 year old mother with him, for the benefit of her health.

We learn that Mr. Webster Pope contemplates another trip to California soon.

A Novel Bank.

The family of Benjamin Denny found in a three-legged stool at his house, in this city, $679 in gold. It was supposed that about that much in gold had been left by him, but where it was secreted no one could tell. Mother Barnes, the success of Plum Hollow, back of Brockville, was consulted, and she told the inquirers that it was buried in the garden. They dug up the premises and tore up the floor in the house, but to no purpose. By accident the stool was tipped over, when a hole in the bottom filled with plaster of paris was discovered, and upon investigation the gold was found secreted in the bottom of the stool. Mr. Denny lived alone. He lost $200 by the failure of the Johnson Bank ten years ago, and since that time he has been making his deposits in the three-legged stool.—Ogdensburg Journal.

CUTE. A Hartford youngster goes to church where the concluding Amen of the parson's prayer is sung by the choir. The other night, after he had said his prayers, he produced a harmonica from beneath his pillow and astonished his mother by blowing a blast where the Amen came in, remarking: "That is the way we do in church."

A MEAN UNDERTAKER. About as mean a man as often comes to light is the undertaker who took advantage of a poor woman last week. Her child died and the undertaker agreed to bury it in Calvary Cemetery for $12, and charged her $2.50 for a burial permit. She was too poor even to go to the cemetery with her little one's coffin, and she learned a day or two later that the undertaker had buried the child in the Potter's Field, and that burial permits are issued free by the city. She will sue the undertaker, and it is to be hoped that he will be made to smart for his meanness.—N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

The Kansas farmers anticipate the winter drearily. The corn crop will be less than half the average, and there will be a corresponding decrease in the number of swine and beehives raised.

FEELING TIME. The Swiss watchmakers have invented a watch for the blind. A small peg is set in the centre of each figure. When the hour hand is approaching a certain hour the peg for that hour drops when the quarter before it is passed. The person feels the peg is down, and then counts back to twelve. He can thus tell the time within a few minutes, and by practice he can become so expert as to tell the time almost exactly.

As so kindly, gently called: "Come, rammy, rammy, ram; to see the folks abuse you so I grieved and sorry am."

The ram quite dropped its humble air, and dropped from off its feet, and when the parson landed, he was behind the hindmost seat.

As he shot out the door and closed it with a slam, he named a California town—I think 'twas "Yuba Dam."—Er.

Sore Eyes

The eyes are always in sympathy with the body, and afford an excellent index of its condition. When the eyes become weak, and the lids inflamed and sore, it is an evanescent symptom that has become descriptive of Sarsaparilla, for which Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the best known remedy.

Cured

My eyes are now in a splendid condition and I am as well and strong as ever. — Mrs. Wilson, Boston.

For many years I was troubled with a humor in my eyes, and was unable to obtain any relief until I commenced using Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This has been the best remedy I have ever used. I believe it to be the best of blood purifiers. — C. E. Upton, Nashua, N. H.

From childhood, and until within a few years, I have suffered with Weak and Sore Eyes. I have used for these complaints, with beneficial results, Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and I am now in perfect health. — Mrs. C. Phillips, Oliver, Vt.

I suffered for a year with Inflammation in my left eye. Three ulcers formed on the eyelid, and I suffered much pain and causing great pain. After trying many other remedies, to no purpose, I was finally induced to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and it has entirely removed it.

Three bottles of Ayer's medicine have been entirely removed. My eyes are now restored, and there is no sign of any inflammation, sore, or ulcer in my eye. — Kenneth T. Rice, Boston.

My daughter, ten years old, was afflicted with Sore Eyes. During the last two years she never saw light of any kind. Physicians of the highest standing exerted their best efforts, but with no success.

On the recommendation of a friend I purchased a bottle of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and it has entirely removed the trouble.

Before she had used the third bottle her sight was restored, and she can now see perfectly. I believe it to be the best of all, and I believe that all grape-growers after learning this, adopt methods of their own, adapted to the different kinds of grapes they cultivate.

There are, however, certain general rules, applicable to all methods of pruning, and one is that a few strong and vigorous canes are better for all purposes than a larger number, which would necessarily be weaker and smaller. And that method of pruning which keeps up an annual renewal of young and healthy wood, and the least old and non-bearing stems, is best. All who have studied the habits of the vine know that the fruit-bearing shoots come from the young wood of last season's growth, and unless a vine is severely pruned, and a large portion of its canes cut back, it will greatly overbear, and set more fruit than it can bring to maturity. As a rule, that system is best which allows no more fruit than the vines can ripen perfectly, and at the same time grow sufficient and vigorous wood for the next year's bearing.

The Rockland Standard says the dipper which adorns their fountains is of tomato or style attached by a rope yarn to the fountain.

The stand pipe of the Franklin Water Works burst on Thursday morning of last week; fortunately the tank was only partially full at the time of the accident. The tank was of iron and was 30 feet high and 35 in diameter. Several thousand dollars have been expended on it recently in enlarging it. Loss about $8,000.

A military company to be known as the Franklin Cadets, is being formed in Holbrook, which now number about forty boys, averaging fifteen years of age.

The next step is to obtain a petition from the citizens and selection to Governor Ames for permission to establish such a military organization.

The quill which was used by Gov. Ames when he signed the Soldiers' Exemption Bill, was presented to Col. B. S. Lovell of Reynolds Post, 28, G. A. E. of Weymouth. The quill is gold mounted, and on one of the bands is inscribed "Soldiers' Exemption Bill, signed June 16, 1887. Presented to Col. B. S. Lovell by Gov. Ames." The Colonel has presented the quill to the Post.

Fire was discovered in a cottage owned by Jotham Shalby, of East Weymouth, North of Sagamore Hill, Nantasket Beach, about 11 o'clock, last Monday night. The house was occupied by a Swedish family and the flames spread so rapidly that it was with difficulty that the family were rescued, the children being taken from their chamber with their clothing on fire. This fire destroyed four houses with their contents and a barn. Total loss about $9,000.

During the summer a great deal of rubbish collects in the garden and perhaps in the orchard. All this ought to be raked up and burned and otherwise disposed of. Left on the ground it furnishes feeding for insects.

Anecdotes.

"Please, sir, have you seen a gentleman without a little girl?"

"Well, and what if I have, little one?"

"My Uncle John has lost me, and I thought if you'd seen a gentleman without a little girl you could tell me where he was."

Pedestrian. "Madam, a boy who I am told is your son has just thrown a stone at me, causing a wound that is very painful. What are you going to do about it?"

Mamma. "Well?"

Mom. "I've counted eight hundred and thirty-seven, and I'm just as mad as I was before."

"Do you know why Mr. — allows his hair to grow long, while Mrs. — keeps hers cut so short?"

Fred. "How would you define darkness?"

Ned. "A blind Ethiopian, in a dark cellar, at midnight, looking for a black cat."

Staples & Phillips of Taunton are negotiating for the purchase of Steamer No. 100, to be the last of the Old Colony line, for use as an excursion steamer to take the place of the Excursion State, burned last Spring.

John Virney and his wife have lived on Moosehead Lake, Me., for twenty-five years and during that time have together killed over 400 bears, unnumbered deer and caribou, and much small game. — Mrs. Virney is an expert bear hunter in all his hunting excursions. In June, 1885, they killed five bears in one day.

The Quincy Patriot.

SATURDAY, OCT. 29, 1887.

State Senate of 1888.

There are twenty-two senatorial districts in Massachusetts, having a margin of 85 for the closest and 808 for the largest plurality. This makes the character of the Massachusetts Senate next year a matter of great concern to the Republican party, particularly with reference to its temperance plank. The liquor party will pour their funds into even these districts to elect an anti-amendment body. Whoever voted for the amendment as the platform demanded last year, and has been renominated this year, and stands on the advanced platform should be sustained by Republicans. Every possible effort should be made to save the Senate to decent and progressive legislation. The fact must be faced that all that rum money and third party votes can do to make the next Senate Democratic will be done.—Traveler.

Houses at Cost.

Cornelius and William K. Vanderbilt have decided to commence a rather curious business enterprise, which in its working is expected to be benevolent, but which will not have the least appearance of charity about it. They have been considering the plan, which was suggested by Erastus Winan, for a long time. They propose to build a large number of small houses in the suburbs of New York city, with every comfort and convenience, and sell them to the working people at cost. The purchaser will be insured against the loss of the property, if he meets with some misfortune before the whole amount is paid up. The house will be sold on the installment plan, in monthly or yearly payments, which will amount to no more than fair rental. The life of the purchaser will be insured to the extent of the unpaid amount of the purchase price. The policy will be held as a mortgage, and if the purchaser dies, the amount of the policy pays off what is owing on the house, which is then clear for the heirs. The scheme is a novel one, and the Vanderbilts will make an experiment shortly by erecting fifty houses on Staten Island, and charging only fair prices for the property, which will be sold only to working people.—Demorest's Magazine.

STREET RAILWAY. The construction committee has closed the contract with F. W. Brightman of Fall River for the building and equipping of the Framingham Union street Railway. The outfit of this line, as contracted for, will, among other things, consist of thirty horses, and thirteen cars of the latest and most approved pattern. The Trail, to be used where the streets are not paved, is to weigh thirty pounds to the yard, and the side-bearing rail, to be used where the streets are paved, is to weigh thirty-five pounds to the yard. The work of construction between South Framingham and Framingham Centre will begin at once.

GOOD WHITTLER. A railroad station agent at Dunkirk, N. Y., in his leisure time has whittled out of 280 pieces of wood a perfect model of a locomotive and tender. He was five months at the job.

AN EYE TO BUSINESS. An Altoona man sold a lot for $1000 a short time ago. The man who bought it put a house on half of it and then sold the remainder of the lot for $900. The curious feature of the transaction is that the man who made the last named purchase is the same who sold the whole lot for $1000 only a few months before.

MISTAKEN. The Warren county, Penn., commissioners have discovered that hundreds of couples have been married, in the past few years, in an old house on the western border of the county, under the impression that they were being married in Ohio, and escaping the license law. They find the house is in Pennsylvania, and insist that all the marrying ought to be done over again, to give the matches a legal status.

A VALUABLE TRUNK. A negro in Americus, Ga., bought a trunk at a store for $1.50. An hour afterward he returned and said he guessed he'd got too much for his money. The trunk was filled with the storekeeper's stock of Mackinaw straw hats that had been packed away in it for the winter. They were worth from $75 to $100.

“A woman in Elmira got out an old clock that had been out of use for thirteen years, wound it up, and started it, but did not disturb the hands, thinking she would wait and set the clock by her husband's watch. Before he returned the city clock struck, and she was surprised to see that the old time-piece was right to a fraction of a minute.”

New York Fashions.

NOVEL DRESS GOODS.

Plaids, bars and stripes, the successes of last summer, appeal to us now, in richer tones and heavier material. The three have largely invaded wools, and even the dignity of velvet has succumbed to a predominating craze. Embedded in its pile, are lines of silk disposed in squares or half invisible bars within squares, while nothing is more fashionable than striped velvets. Gold is in favor for intersections, and a glancing light plays there by many pretty tricks upon the dark surfaces they adorn while bolder patterns display the many different colors hitherto thought suitable for ginghams only. Silks follow, and every imaginable chord is struck in harmony with prevalent ideas; some of the most beautiful showing innumerable narrow stripes of velvet set on silk, both in graduating tones of one color or fine groupings of varied colors. They are meant for combinations and will form artistic touches. Velvet brocades are likewise a commanding element in dress for day or evening, but silk brocades are for the most part superseded by moire, which never was more conspicuous. Satins are also much used; a very pretty example in Lord and Taylor's bow window, being of green satin with draperies and short sleeves of white plaid and guaze.

JACQUARD WOOLS

come more and more to the front as the season advances. Velvet leaves and flowers in natural colors are set in broad columns, or large velvet figures in mathematical shapes bestrew the woollen surface. Soutache braiding patterns are another favorite style for these velvet figurings, which cover the groundwork with greater or less profusion, while uncut velvet designs, whether in columns or separately, afford additional variety. Plaided or barred wools replace in deeper tones, last summer's ginghams, and like the ginghams of that time, will often be made up with jersey waists, which in view of special demand, come in unusual diversity of make; with yokes, with Shirring on the shoulders, with plaits, etc.

PLUSH FOR CLOAKS was the success of the season last winter, and will be as much so at present. There are therefore all sorts of plushes, black, seal, golden brown, gray, gobelin blue, red or green, and they will lead not only for long garments but the little shoulder wraps which are too stylish to be given up.

For street wear, of course, some dark color is preferable for a long cloak, but the small wraps are often quite brilliant in tone, and may give an excellent finish to some handsome costume. On mild autumn days, capes made entirely of strung beads with long bead fringes, are very fashionable.

LUCY CARTER.

Too Fly.

“Say! lemme use your telephone a minit!” he exclaimed, as he rushed into an office on Griswold street.

“Certainly.”

“Hello! hello! Give me 6205. Is that you darling?”

“Yes.”

“Say, pet, I left my wallet on the dresser with $250 in it. Did you find it?”

“Yes.”

“Good! ‘Fraid I’d lost it on the street. Big load off my mind. Shall I bring up those shoes?”

“I’m dead broke, you know, but perhaps I can borrow $5 until after dinner, so as not to disappoint you. Good-by darling.”

“Good-by, sweetness.”

“Say,” he said to the man at the desk, “perhaps you overheard what I said and will lend me the $5?”

The occupant pointed over his shoulder to the door.

“What? Skip?”

“Yes.”

“Too old?”

“Yes.”

“Been caught before?”

“Yes.”

“I skip! Good-by!”

Tired of Hotel Fare.

A noted hotel keeper in Saratoga, the excellence of whose table is a matter of national repute, admits that he grows very tired of hotel fare at times. “Once in a while,” he says, “I go and hunt up my steward or some other employe who has his family with him in the village, and I say, ‘May I go to your house to dinner today?’ I go there, and as I eat the corned beef and cabbage or Irish stew, or whatever the wife puts before me, I think I never tasted food so good. After that I eat all my meals at the hotel for a while, and then I hunt up another old fashioned dish in some simple little home.”—New York Sun.

An Old Directory.

A Boston directory of seventy-seven years of age, or ten years before Boston became a city, contains the following information: At that time Boston had nine selectmen, who were surveyors of highways, and with twelve others constituted the School Committee. There were seventeen constables, fourteen senators, forty-five doctors, and four dentists. There were but four banks. A branch of the United States Bank with a capital of $700,000; Massachusetts Bank, capital $800,000; Union Bank, capital $1,200,000; Boston Bank, capital $1,800,000; seven marine and five insurance companies, twenty-two churches and but three apothecaries, seven stage offices. A stage ran once a day to Medford, and twice a day to Cambridge, and three times a week through Woburn, going north; once a day to Salem, and four times a week to Newton. A mail to New York three times a week. That year five partnerships were dissolved, and fifteen new firms organized.—Boston Traveller.

A Dutch Venice.

Amsterdam is a city of canals, and yet we are not constantly impressed that it is a water city, as we are in Venice. The town lies at the end of the Y., which is a gulf of the Zuyder Zee; and there are several great canals, shaped like the segments of concentric circles, intersected by some 300 smaller canals; and yet there are so many streets and squares, and places where we can drive about as freely as in any other city, that there really is little comparison between Amsterdam and the horseless city of the Adriatic. Most of the houses are very tall, very narrow, and stand with their gable ends to the street. These gables are generally built in an ornamental form, and present a very odd and varied appearance. At the top of nearly every house we see a projecting beam, with a rope and tackle, by which heavy goods, marketing fuel and such household commodities are drawn up from the street or canal below to the various floors. This saves a great deal of trouble in getting upstairs.—St. Nicholas.

PASSPORTS NOT REQUIRED. The government has published new regulations permitting American citizens to enter or depart from Cuban ports without being obliged to present a passport or other documents signed by a Spanish consul. A simple certificate from the American consul at the port of entry will enable any citizen of the United States to travel all over Cuba, to remain on the island as long as he pleases, and to leave whenever he wishes without molestation.

Not Sure of a Street Railway.

Another obstacle presents itself which may indefinitely postpone the proposed street railway in Quincy. It will be remembered that the petitioners for location, desired to use what is termed the "T" rail, but the Selectmen with the heavy teaming in Quincy in mind, voted that the company must lay the "flat" rail.

Saturday the directors of the company met and considered the situation. They found that the flat rail would entail about double the cost, as it would necessary to pave more, and besides it would take twice as much to keep in repair. The increased outlay they considered would make the building of the road impractical. The T rail had been recommended by nearly all of the other street railway companies, and the directors thought that if the Selectmen understood the improved T rail, there would be no objection to it in Quincy. With this in view they petitioned the Selectmen for another hearing, which was to have been given last evening.

We are assured the improved T rail does not sit above ground as the rail on the Old Colony railroad, or like those on the Dorchester avenue line of horse cars between Milton and Fenton's Corner, but they sit as low as a flat rail, and permit of paving close to both sides, just sufficient space being left on the inside of the rails for the flange of the wheel. Such being the facts we can see no objection to the "T" rail.

The Sunday Herald commented as follows on the work of the Road Commissioners on Hancock street:

"The town of Quincy is just now carrying out an extensive public improvement in the shape of a thorough rebuilding of a section of Hancock street (the main avenue to Boston), extending northward from the junction of Adams street for a distance of about three miles. The road commissioners are constructing a Telford road forty-one feet wide, with sidewalks seven feet wide. Between the walks and the roadway proper are borders of grass four feet in width, and largely through the efforts of the Village Improvement Society, young trees have been set at intervals of thirty feet. The road is being constructed in the most substantial manner, the high places being cut down and the low places filled up. When brought to the proper grade, it is rolled with the town's 20-ton road roller; next a paved bottom of stone, set on edge by hand, is laid to the depth of eight inches, and the crevices filled with smaller stone and rolled; then four inches of broken stone, two and one half inches in size, are put on and rolled, followed by three inches of broken stone two inches in size; after being again rolled, one inch of 'binding,' one inch of fine broken stone running on an inch screen, and one inch of coarse sand for a top dressing are applied in succession, then well watered and rolled again, and the crevices filled with smaller stone and rolled; the annual cost of the town is to be one of the most substantial, as well as the least, leading out of Boston. It has been the aim of the road commissioners of Quincy to build a roadway that would stand the very heavy traffic which daily passes over it, including, as it does, not only the large express teaming business of Quincy, Weymouth, Braintree and other towns, but also the heavy granite wagons coming to this city from the quarries of the old 'stone town.' The work is being done under the immediate charge of Mr. John P. Prichard, superintendent of streets of Mr. H. T. Whitman, engineer."

GOOD TEMPLARS. Election did not interfere with the annual meeting of Good Templars, at Hancock Lodge of Quincy on Tuesday evening, if one might judge by the large attendance and the good time. The lodges were represented as follows:—Temple of Campbell, 20; Fraternal of Brockton, 14; Myrtle of Abington, 3; Plymouth Rock of Plymouth, 2; Crystal Spring of Brookville, 1; Amerant of Hartford, Conn., 1; Hancock of Quincy, 23. President John Scott, Jr., presided. The entertainment programme consisted of a harmonica solo by Brother Brown, reading by Sister Hines, song round by Sisters Perkins and Lovell, solo by Sister West, duets by Sisters Lovell and Reynolds, trio by Sisters Perkins and Lovell and Brother Ryder, address on temperance by Brother Alexander, and remarks by Bro. Rich, Goodridge, Baker, Hathaway, Edwards, Rockwell, Sister Bich, and President Scott. The next annual meeting will be at Whitman.

CHARLESTON, S. C. A Quincy boy who is living in the above-named city writes, "I read in your last issue that Atlanta displayed one Confederate flag during their exposition week. Old Charleston went one better during gala week, as I saw two waving across the street, one was the original that waved over Fort Sumter. It was a lively time for old Charleston and a surprise to all that the city could get so wide awake. It is understood that this gala display is to be a yearly thing. We are leaving summer weather with mosquitoes still singing around at night."

NEW JEWELRY STORE. A. E. Whitcomb has opened this week in Durbin & Merrill's block, a jewelry store, and in it through our advertising columns the public to call and see him. He has a stock of diamonds, watches and jewelry which he believes will give the best of satisfaction, and invites our citizens to call and their education.

AMMONIA SOAR. It is well known to our housekeepers that ammonia is one of the most cleansing agents that can be used in a household. W. H. Doble has for sale an Ammonia Soap, which claims to have twice the cleansing properties as the same weight of common soap, and by its use the labor of washing is made quite easy. For particulars read his card.

YE OLDE Tyme CONCERT. On next Wednesday evening the Ladies' Aid Society, connected with the Universalist Church, will give a supper and singing meeting of sacred music, a scenic comedy of "Sophia," at the Boston Museum—both afternoon and evening. Next Sunday evening the noted educator and preacher the Rev. A. D. May will deliver a discourse on the subject, "Through Education to Temperance."

QUINCY POINT.

PIE SUPPER.

The attendance at the pie supper and entertainment at the Congregational vestry on Thursday evening was considerably lessened by the severe rain which commenced soon in the evening. The tables were temptingly spread with meat pies and sweet pies in abundance, which proved in the eating to be as excellent as they looked. The following programme was presented:

Piano Solo, Miss Penney, "A voice that is still," Mr. Farwell, "When the heart is dead," Miss Clark, Duet, "Flower Girl," Mr. Hersey, Piano Duet, Miss Penney and Miss Clark, "The King's champion," Mr. Hersey, "Calm and the storm," Miss Clark, "Tristis," "Invariante," Miss Clark, Miss Clark, Messrs. Farwell and Hersey.

The ladies of the Congregational Church will hold a fair on Wednesday and Thursday afternoons and evenings, Dec. 6th and 7th.

The mercury had gone pretty low Wednesday—nineteen above zero.

Warren W. Adams is confined to the house and threatened with rheumatic fever.

Mt. Wollaston Lodge of Old Fellows have a social next Wednesday evening.

Hazen E. Ricker was installed into the office of chaplain of Merry Mount Lodge, Nov. 4th.

The Rev. Mr. Cotton baptized seven small children, at Christ Church, last Sunday afternoon.

A horse owned by Mr. G. F. Wilson died very suddenly Sunday, probably of heart disease.

Mrs. Jennie K. D. Conant, of Scotland, will speak at Faxon Hall, on Sunday, Nov. 13, at 2:30 and 7.

The last half of Prof. Russ B. Walker's dancing school will begin next Wednesday evening at Faxon Hall.

G. Horace Ellison, formerly pressman in the PATRIOT office, is ill with typhoid fever in City Hospital, Boston.

The afternoons will be but fourteen minutes shorter, as they commence to lengthen Dec. 6th. The sun now sets at 4:25.

A flock of geese was seen Wednesday noon, wending their way southward. Now we are waiting for the snowstorm.

The Fragment Society will meet on Wednesday afternoon next at 2 o'clock at the house of Mrs. J. H. Emery, Hancock street.

Just received at D. B. Stevens, another odd lot of rubber and leather boots, for men and boys' wear, at prices cheaper than ever.

In the hale and hounds run Wednesday, given by Harvard Athletic Association, Mr. James F. Harlow '88 came in second of the hounds, G. P. Cogswell, Harvard's half mile runner being first.

Water was put into the house of Hose 4, last week, by the Quincy Water Company, this has long been needed, and will doubtless be appreciated by Townspeople.

The advancement in the study of music in our schools seems really surprising. Several who had the pleasure of listening to the rehearsal of the A. B. and C. Grammar grades last Monday morning at the Washington street, under the direction of Miss Mandel, pronounced it truly wonderful, that so much had been accomplished in so short a time. In a little more than a year of training the children readily read music, sight, and keep excellent time. The visitors also spoke of the deportment which was perfect throughout.

The fullest detail returns published by any paper in Norfolk County will be found on the third page of the PATRIOT. The news will be verified by Town Clerk Gill.

The members of the Quincy Charitable Society will hold their annual meeting Monday November 14th, at 3 P.M., at the home of Mrs. Benjamin Curtis, school street.

On petition the Selectmen have revised the permit of the New England Telephone Company, relative to height of poles, fire alarm rights, Bradley's rights, hauling up slack wire, and the maintenance of a telegraph at the Steamer house.

Postal Telegraph Service.

Jay Gould, so the story goes, began his speculatory career by selling traps. Whether the story is true or false, it is certain that Mr. Gould has been catching prey for many years, and that he has now caught the American public in his Western Union trap. Mr. Gould's vaulting ambition has not overleaped itself, more's the pity, and the greedy monopolist does about as he pleases with most of the public interests of the country. Since he contrived to swallow the Baltimore and Ohio wires, "night rates" have been abolished, and the regular rates have been increased one half. The ridiculously exorbitant price of thirty-seven cents is now demanded for telegraphing ten words from Boston to New York, and the public must pay, or leave the telegraph wires severely alone. What are the business men thinking about that they sit calmly down and pay attribute to the conscienceless monopolist Gould? There is one way out of the difficulty, and that is for the commercial interests to ceaselessly and earnestly agitate for a system of postal telegraphs. There is no use in waiting for the daily press to take up the cry against the Western Union company, because the daily press is so directly at the mercy of the corporation with the enormous maw, being quite dependent upon Gould's good graces for its news dispatches. The general public, headed by the leading business men, must act in this matter, if there is to be any action at all, and one of the political parties must be compelled to urge the adoption of a postal telegraph service upon the government. The Western Union monopoly must be crushed, and it can only be crushed by the force of public opinion.—Boston Home Journal.

Thought he was too Personal.

A housemaid, after being a short time in her place, gave warning. Her mistress asked her what she had to find fault with; was the work too hard, or what? No, she had nothing to complain of on that score, but she could not stand being prayed at by the master at morning prayers.

Mistress (logitur): "What on earth do you mean, Mary? Your master does not pray at any time."

"Oh, yes, he does, marm: he prays at me every day, and I won't stand it any longer."

"What does he say, then?"

"Why, he says, 'O Lord, who hatest nothing but the housemaid.'"

Mistress, after a little reflection and further inquiry, ascertains that Mary has thus interpreted, "O Lord, who hateth nothing that Thou hast made."

ON THE DECLINE. The American Collector says, warningly: "Prudent men will hesitate before buying land in Southern California at present inflated prices. The great land craze there already shows signs of subsiding. Land is now changing hands, with only ten per cent. of the purchase money paid down, and balance on long terms of credit. This indicates that buyers are not anxious to invest, and holders willing to sell on any terms. The collapse draws near. When orange lands sell at $800 to $1,000 per acre, and wheat lands fit for nothing but grain, sell at $150 to $200 per acre, and raisin lands change owners at $250 to $400, it is high time for bona fide purchasers to look elsewhere and get better value for their money. Even the Californians are willing to admit they never expect to see farming and orchard lands sell at such fabulous prices."

CANNED FRUITS.

All people who use canned fruits will read with interest the following from Popular Science Monthly: "Mr. T. P. White, in a communication to the Chemical Society, gives a decidedly negative answer to the question whether the acids of canned fruits may not form poisonous salts with the tins. He reports, as the result of his experiments, that 'tin is entirely devoid of danger when taken internally in any form that might arise from being in contact with fruits or vegetables.' He believes that the cases of accidental poisoning attributed to tin were due to solder or other impurities—arsenic, copper or lead. Professor W. Mattieu Williams says that there need be no lead in the solder—that it is only put in for cheapness's sake, and that tin makes a superior solder to any alloy. Therefore, all danger may be obviated by prohibiting the use of any other solder than pure tin."

PAPER COFFINS. The announcement has been made that a paper coffin has been invented and put upon the market. A man may now build his house of paper, eat his dinner from paper plates, wipe his face with a paper handkerchief, buy his wife a paper piano and go to his grave in a paper coffin. The coffin may be paid for with a piece of paper and the death published on another piece. There are few things more useful than paper.—Philadelphia Record.

DANGEROUS INVENTIONS. If the new inventions of the photographic camera are generally adopted, the instrument will become truly dangerous. One of the novel cameras is the "detective," which is made to look like anything but a camera. Another peculiar instrument is the waistcoat or bosom camera to be concealed within the folds of the wearer's waistcoat or shirt-front, the minute lens projecting through a spare button-hole. Some small but excellent photographs have been taken by this remarkable little instrument.

THE PRIZE OFFERED BY THE FRENCH GOVERNMENT OF $10,000 FOR THE MOST VALUABLE DISCOVERY RELATING TO THE UTILIZATION OF ELECTRICITY IS TO BE AWARDED NEXT DECEMBER. IT IS FOR ANY USE OR APPLICATION OF ELECTRICITY, NAMELY, AS A SOURCE OF HEAT, OF LIGHT, OR OF CHEMICAL ACTION, AS A MEANS OF TRANSMISSION OF MECHANICAL POWER, OR OF VERBAL COMMUNICATION IN ANY FORM, OR, FINALLY, AS A CURATIVE AGENT.

CROCKERY BREAKING. Mr. Fred Keith, manager of the Astor House, New York, says, "Our business comes with such a rush that we cannot prevent crockery breakage. About $400 per month is what it amounts to. Teaspoons disappear very fast, but $2000 per year would cover the loss. Replacing costs us not over $2000 a year, and the loss in linen amounts to $3000. We receive from $1 to $2 per barrel for damaged crockery."

A SARDINE WELL. Little fishes swimming in oil was the remarkable discovery recently made on a farm in Alberta a few miles from Minneapolis. A stream of oil was discovered flowing from the base of a small hill and a blast was made. An old miner entered the aperture and brought out a painful of oil in which were a number of small eyeless fish. They were of a bright yellow color and without scales. Several pounds of this wonderful variety of the fish tribe were taken out. Some of the fish were prepared for the table and declared to be equal to the best sardines.

The Largest Gorilla Yet.

Boston has just received from Africa the largest gorilla ever landed in this country. His name is Jack, and he is five feet in height when standing erect and measures seven feet from the end of one outstretched hand to the other. He weighs about 125 pounds, and exhibits enormous strength, which compared with that of man seems like a child's. He arrived in a large box made of planking two and a half inches thick, and when being removed from the ship he tore large splinters from the hard wood planks with as much ease as a child would break a twig. The hair, which is very coarse and from two to four inches in length, is of a greenish gray color, and on the back, legs and arms inclines to a black. His shoulders are immense. The expression of the face, which is black, is scowling. The eyes are small, sunken in the head, and the lips large and thin.—New York Sun.

A Phenomenal Crazy Quilt.

Miss Ella Pike, of Warrensburg, Mo., has just completed a crazy quilt which she has spent over four years in making. It is two yards in width and two and three-quarter yards long, and is bordered with heavy ruby-colored plush and lined with gold-colored surah silk, and is beautiful in the extreme. The feature of the quilt is that it consists entirely of silk, satin, velvet and plush scraps from famous and noted persons, such as Presidents and their wives, mostly all of President Arthur's Cabinet and their family, most of President Cleveland's Cabinet, officials and families of the United States Supreme Court, members and families of diplomatic corps, United States Senators and Representatives and their wives, Governors and families of different States, actors and actresses and other noted persons. Every piece in the quilt has a history. The quilt comprises nine large blocks, one of which contains pieces from the dresses and cravats of members of her graduating classes and her teachers. The kind of work which she has decorated it with are flat and raised wool and silk chenille and arasene, tinsel, and embroidery, brush painting; Kensington embroidery in silks and crewels, braiding, beading, applique, etching, transfer, cross-stitch, different designs in fans, palettes, plaques and bugs of silk, satin, velvet and plush. The quilt contains pieces of ribbon from two of Mrs. Cleveland's wedding bonnets.

Facts About London.

JENNY LIND IS DEAD. The wonderful "Swedish nightingale" has lived very quietly of late years, training the women singers in the Bach choir in London, and teaching a class of poor girls, whom she prepared for concert and opera. Of the vast sums she earned as a singer, she had spent nearly all in charity, founding and maintaining art scholarships and charities in Sweden, and a hospital in Liverpool and a large section of a similar institution in London. Her character seems to have been as beautiful as her voice. She leaves a husband, two sons and a daughter. She was buried on Saturday last.

SCHOLARLY PRONUNCIATION. A young lawyer in a Texas town invited some of his friends to a game of cards in his room, to be followed by a little supper. Frogs were a new species of food in that latitude, and a dish of them cooked in the choicest way was the feature of the occasion.

SUPPLEMENT.

SATURDAY, NOV. 12, 1887.

Working Women in New York.

Mrs. Eliza Putnam Heaton has been investigating the employments, wages and prospects of working women in New York. She finds that women constitute more than half the workers in dry-goods stores, a quarter of the telegraph-operators, about one-fifth of the type-setters, and more than half the type-writers. Women as a rule seem to make less good telegraphers and type-setters than men, as good stenographers, and better type-writers and dry-goods clerks. Nowhere do they receive equal pay for equal work, except where the men's trades unions have made it a stipulation, and have been able to carry their point. More women are employed in dry-goods stores than in any other line of work except domestic service and factory labor. The conclusion Mrs. Heaton draws from her investigations is that the general outlook for self-supporting women in all lines is probably better than it ever was before. She says: "Business habits and attention to health are the two great needs." As a very bright girl who is earning good wages puts it, "As fast as we learn to do something that somebody wants done, and stop trying to carry the drawing-room into the office, we get on very well." —Woman's Journal.

A Young Ventriloquist.

A little Boston boy who was taken to the entertainment of a ventriloquist some time ago, and who was close observer of the performer's modus operandi, accompanied his parents last week to his father's native town, and among the places visited during their rural sojourn was the cemetery, where sleep the progenitors of his paternal parent. The latter pointed out to the child a certain mound, saying: "There, dear, is the grave of your grandfather." The little fellow gazed curiously at the place of sepulture for a moment, and then, seized by a sudden idea, stooped down, and rapping on the tombstone, said: "Grandpa, are you down there?" following it up with a self supplied "Yes" in as deep and guttural a tone as his little throat could make vocal. "Does you want to come up?" he resumed in his natural pitch of voice, and again dropping to the lower tone answered his own query with a bass and hollow "No." The parents, greatly shocked, cut short further ventriloquist efforts on the part of too precocious child. —Boston Budget.

Too Sensitive.

Perhaps the Northerners are more to blame than the Southerners for the adoration that is made over confederate flags and ex-confederate enthusiasm as manifested every once in a while in the land of the "late unpleasantness." Because the ex-confederates are enthusiastic at their reunions is no proof that they are disloyal to the reunited country. Why should not men who fought shoulder to shoulder, and women who lost husbands, fathers, brothers, sons and sweethearts, cheer and honor the tattered ensigns and the old leaders who represent all that was once dear to them in a time of agonizing struggle? The very fact of their demonstrations proves them to be men and women with hearts and souls as God made them, and not graceless automata that cannot reverence the dead, or hold as sacred the sacrifices of that cruelly misguided time. Have not Southerners eyes, have they not hands, organs, senses, affections, passions, as Northerners have? They suffered by the war and their sufferings are holy in their memories. That they do not desert their companions in affliction; that they still honor their fallen chiefs and their courageous dead, are traits that should command our most sincere respect; proving, too, that they are made in an heroic mould which above all things today entitles them to be known as Americans. —Boston Home Journal.

Lincoln's Statue Unveiled.

The great statue of Abraham Lincoln, was unveiled recently at Lincoln Park, Chicago. The booming of cannon startled the assembled multitude, and as the sound of the cannon died away over the water of Lake Michigan, "little Abe" Lincoln, the son of Robert T. Lincoln, stepped up to the base of the flag-covered bronze figure of his grandfather, and pulled a rope which held the covering. The folds slowly unloosened and dropped down at the base, and the tall erect figure of Abraham Lincoln shone brightly in the sun. A tremendous shout went up, and it was joined a moment later by the roar from the cannon. Thomas F. Winthrop, one of the trustees of the Bates Fund, out of which the cost of the statue was defrayed, formally presented the figure to the Lincoln Park board, and W. C. Gandy replied in behalf of the board.

Kissed us all Around.

Some little time ago a young lady, who had been teaching a class of half-grown girls in the Sunday-school of Dr. B.'s church, Brooklyn, was called away from the city, rendering it necessary to fill her place.

The superintendent, after looking over his available material for teachers, decided to request one of the young gentlemen of the congregation to take the class.

It so happened that the young man upon whom fell the superintendent's choice, was exceedingly bold—so much so, in fact, that he insisted upon the superintendent going and presenting him to the class. Accordingly the two gentlemen appeared on the little platform, and the superintendent began: "Young ladies, I wish to introduce to you Mr. C., who will in future be your teacher. I would like to have you tell him what your former teacher did, so that he can go right on in the same way."

Immediately a demure miss of fourteen years arose and said: "The first thing our teacher always did was to kiss us all around." —American Magazine.

Troubled With Rats.

Here is a story at the expense of a prominent Boston merchant.

The cellar of his wholesale store on High street was over-run with rats. He purchased two traps of the latest pattern, but only an occasional rodent was captured.

Finally he borrowed a cat from a friend who lived up town, a mile or more from the store. This cat must have been a country cat, for he was very bashful. He spent most of his time behind the merchandise in the cellar, and glimpses of him were few and far between.

Two or three times a week a liberal supply of nice fresh meat was placed in the cellar for the cat, which regularly disappeared, to the cat's evident delight.

So the weeks went by.

One day, the man of whom the cat was borrowed came into the store, remarking:

"Well, you got all through with the cat, I see, pretty quick."

"Why, no?" was the reply. "What do you mean?"

"What do I mean?" That cat has been home for three weeks."

And it was all too true that the troublesome rats had been living on the fat of the land at the merchant's expense for a long time.

A FAT JOH. There is an interpreter living among the Italians in Holbrook whom, it would seem, is making more than the contractors. He gets one dollar a head from each and every Italian who is set to work. This comes out of the poor laborer's pocket. The interpreter also charges an exorbitant price for shanty rent, and for beer and necessary articles of food. Over $900 was paid him out of the wages of the men a short time since, as his share of their earnings for one month.

THRILLING EXPERIENCE. Last Sunday morning a party of five, in a carriage, had a narrow escape from drowning by going through the draw of Warren bridge, Boston. The draw was about to be opened, but the gate keeper thinking that there was time enough for the carriage to pass over opened the gate and motioned for the driver to pass through, but just as the horse placed his fore feet on the draw, it opened, and horse, and carriage with its occupants was precipitated into the water below. The unfortunate were soon rescued but were chilled through, and sometime was spent in restoring them to consciousness.

Conundrums.

When does a cow become real estate? When she is turned into a field.

Why is a nobleman like a book? He has a title.

Why is a fish-hook like the letter f? It makes an eel feel.

Why is a pig in the parlor like a house on fire? The sooner it is put out the better.

Why is a man's hand like a hardware store? It has nails.

Why is a cornet player like a signal service storm observer? One blows the notes and the other notes the blow.

Why is a mother who spoils her children like a person building castles in the air? She indulges in fancy too much.

THOUGHTFUL. A gentleman once asked a little girl, an only child, how many sisters she had, and was told "three or four." Her mother asked Mary, when they were alone, what induced her to tell such an untruth. "Why, mamma," cried Mary, "I did not want him to think you were so poor that you hadn't but one child. Wouldn't he have thought we were dreary poor?"

Mme. Boucicault, the great Parisian shopkeeper, deserves the cross of a Knight of the Legion of Honor which has been bestowed upon her. She has given about $1,000,000 to her employees as a pension for the sick and superannuated, besides splendid library and reading-room funds, and she gives all these in the profits of her business. In her native town she has built a $200,000 bridge across the Saone, to give the people a more direct road to market, and she has distributed more than $1,500,000 to relieve the sufferers from the phylloxera plague.

People have already begun to find fault with the new green two-cent postage stamp which in the language of somebody, looks like a handful of stewed spinach smashed against a white marble tombstone."

—I never saw a man who was large enough to report the whole truth in respect to any thing which he looked at. It has not been considered safe, I think, in heaven, where the manufacturer of men is, to put everything in everybody. The result is that one man carries so much, and another so much. Why, it takes about twenty men to make one sound man. —Beecher.

—If you stop to tell a story to your fellow-workman, just bear in mind that five minutes thus spent by two men for twenty times a day will amount, at forty cents an hour, to $456 in a year.

When attacked by palpitation of the heart let the patient lie down as soon as possible (on the carpet if needs be,) on the right side, partially on the face. In this position the heart will resume its action almost immediately.

NEW Carriage Manufactory.

Quincy cast a larger vote than the city of Northampton.

J. F. Merrill was the leading Representative candidate in Precincts 1 and 3 of Weymouth.

John W. Hart, the Democratic candidate for Senator, did not carry a single precinct in Weymouth.

The total vote in Weymouth was 1831 against 1407 last year. Commenting on the same the Weymouth Gazette said: "The increase in the vote over that of last year is probably due to the change from the old method to precinct voting. The new method has been well received, and the citizens of Weymouth would undoubtedly raise an emphatic voice if a return to the old system should be advocated."

VOTE OF THE CITIES.

The total road will be built in the best manner consistent with safety, economy and durability; the rails will be of steel weighing from thirty to forty-five pounds to the yard and laid on sleepers which will be below the ground. Wherever the road is built in the center of a street it will be paved or Macadamized between the rails and the sleepers, and inches outside of each other when laid upon the ground. It will be so done only at all street crossings, and about eighteen inches beyond the rail which is next to the traveled way, driveways from residences will be in proper condition. All rails will be laid flat with the street, a very small rise being left on the inside of each for the flanges of the car wheels.

3d. The cars are to be like ordinary horse cars; the front end of each being occupied by the "motor" mentioned in the 1st clause; a small space is reserved for the engineer (or driver). Passengers will enter and leave the cars by the rear platform; the lights will be of electricity taken from the main wire; the speed will be varied to as high as fifteen miles an hour; and is under the control of the engineer; hand brakes on both the front and rear platform may be used if necessary. Proprietary operators would be furnished for the rail road.

3d. The amount of service to be rendered the public cannot at first be positively stated, but it is the intention to make trips every fifteen minutes and to run

E. B. Underwood.

On the 11th day of February 1881, the Massachusetts Benevolent Association issued through their Quaker Agent, A. G. Oliver, a policy of three thousand dollars on the life of E. W. Underwood, who died Oct. 24th, 1887. During that time, twelve years and eight months, the deceased paid into the Association the sum of $237.12.

Proof of his death was received at their office on the 14th day of the present month, and on the next day, the company through their agent, paid the widow the full amount of the policy.

Such promptness will be appreciated by the several hundred members in Quincy.

The company is now the largest and strongest in the New England States, and issues definite policies from 1,000 to 10,000 dollars.

The following letter speaks for itself:

W. G. CORTELL, Esq., TREASURER.

Dear Sir,—I wish to acknowledge the receipt of your check for $3,000 in payment of policy of insurance on the life of my late husband, E. W. Underwood, who died October 24th.

I have often heard of the excellencies of your Association and this furnishes me with ample proof of its truth.

I wish especially to thank you for your prompt and courteous settlement—your check having been received within twenty-four hours of the time the proofs of death were furnished by me.

of falling health, whether in the form of Night Sweats and Nervousness, or in a sense of General Weakness and Loss of Appetite, should suggest the use of Aver's Sarsaparilla. This preparation is most effective for giving tone and health to the body and system, promoting the digestion and assimilation of food, restoring the nervous forces to their normal condition, and for purifying, enriching,
and vitalizing the blood.

stopping to rest, and was compelled to give up Aver's Sarsaparilla, which I did, and I am now in health and strength again, and for purifying, enriching,
and vitalizing the blood.

BOTTLES AND RAGS.

A THANKSGIVING STORY.

Bottles had been declaiming from the top of a barrel which stood among other merchandise upon the dock, when a slim mite of a girl came toward him from the other side of the wharf. Bottles jumped down from the barrel, and with a stage stride, approached the girl. They are a quaint pair; he a gatherer of empty bottles, she a rag picker. If ever they had names they are now no longer spoken, for they are known among the quarters they visit as Bottles and Rags. They were Boston street waifs.

Bottles is one mass of tatters and flitters from crownless hat to torn shoes, through which his frost bitten toes peep. And the girl, if anything, is more ragged than he. As he grasps hold of the hand, the spirit of the man within him speaks:

"Poor little Rags! cold as a lump of ice. Where you b'een? what you got? and what you goin' to do with it? If you've b'een and got muthin' and can't do anythin', then come with yer father. He's got ten cents, and ten cents'll buy a plate of fried cakes, kid."

It was interesting to study the expression of utter trust which came upon the girl's face while the boy is speaking. Her father! That was only a pet term he was wont to use, expressive of his guardian-ship over her.

"Bottles," said the girl, after a short pause, "what's the most money you ever had in all yer life?"

"To onet, do you mean, Rags?"

"Yup."

"Well, let me see; I had—why! last Christmas I had as much as one seventy-five!"

BOTTLES AND RAGS.

"You poor thing! yet too poor for me to associate with," broke in the girl, as she drew her ragged skirt away with mock pride.

"See here, Rags, you're allers b'en square with yer father. You've got somethin' on yer mind. Jist tell me the hull thing er—I'll cut you off with ten cents, not havin' the reg'lar shillin'!"

"Feast your eyes on that," said the girl, holding out the hand which she had concealed behind her.

The boy fell back a step or two as he gazed upon the article which she held.

"Rags, hain't I brought you up better ner this? You, you who I picked out the gutter! Oh! it's sharper than a snake's tail to have a priggin' darter!"

"But I didn't prig the puss," quickly exclaimed Bottles.

"Ah! spoken like me own dutiful child. I say, Rags, is the puss well heeled?"

"I-hain't looked; it's heavy, though, and it jingles. I only found it while goin' over on India wharf. I run all the way to find you."

Bottles took the purse in his hands. As he felt the magic touch of its contents through the s'ken meshes it drove all thought of cold or hunger away.

In the purse was more money than either had ever before touched. In it was warmth and virtues, though Bottles gave no thought to either, so overjoyed was he in the possession of the precious money, real gold and silver, for he could tell that by its clinking.

The two waifs finally, cold and tired, reached the tumble down structure in South street, where they lodged. They climbed up the rickety stairways, passed through the narrow, dark and ill smelling halls until they reached the attic door, upon which Bottles tapped softly.

A small circular disk in one of the upper panels slid back, and a thin, beak like nose with a pair of red rimmed eyes appeared in the opening, as a sharp, raspy voice inquired:

"Who's there?"

"Bottles and Rags," responded the boy. The door was opened and the pair passed into the low, musty smelling room.

"Hold up, Rags," whispered the boy, touching her foot with his; "don't lick yer fingers. Hain't I learned you better ner that? I'm goin' to make a lady of you, kid, and I'm bound to have you git on to them small items."

"All right, Bottles; I guess yer right. I ain't up in sich eatin' as this, and you must pardn slips."

"Here's the wine list. Do we want Mumm?"

"Nixy. 'T ain't fur sich as us, Bottles, 'Sides, you'n I has started out on the temp'rane racket, and it hain't the thing fur us to use budge."

"Yer speakin' in a right toot now, Rags. I only mentioned the fack fur fun. Can't you smuggle one of them tarts, Rags?"

"Hain't it stealing?" asked the girl, looking up quickly.

"HAIN'T THIS JEST OLD SCRUMSHIPS?"

"Not if the court knows hisself. I paid for all that comes to this table in the way of grub. I own all, but them dishes, spoons, forks and such, and—But hold up. I'll go put a flea in this feller's ear who sold me the checks."

Bottles rose and went to the cashier's desk. A peculiar expression came upon his face as the boy spoke to him. Then he reached down under the desk and handed out a paper sack. The boy's face was wreathed with smiles when he came back.

"It's all right, Rags. I told him as how I reckoned we'd have to make this feedin' last till next Thanksgiving; also that we wasn't bloated bankers and had hard diggin' fur grub. He give me this bag and said I could take all that we couldn't eat. Hain't it slick?"

"Well, I should smile. Here's two jam tarts!"

"Hold on, Rags; put the solids in first, or you'll smash the tarts."

A smile passed over each face as the waifs loaded their bag with the remains of the meal.

"Ready, Rags?"

"Yes; let me git my op'r'a hat on all square."

She arranged her headgear to suit her, and followed Bottles to the door.

Then—all this brightness turned to clouds, for a tall, blue clad form, with double rows of brass buttons upon the breast, stood there.

"Come with me, kids," said the officer, taking hold of each by the shoulder.

"You don't mean us? I say, boss, you've got the wrong party. We hain't done nuthin', have we, Rags?"

But poor little Rags was crying. The blue coats had always been the terror of her life. She had heard terrible stories about them. Now, she and Bottles are in the care of one, and she is ready to drop in fright.

"What's the racket, boss?" asked Bottles. He, too, was troubled; but he must put on a brave face for the girl's sake.

"Lifting a purse. Come on."

And this was the end of the poor little waifs' grand dinner. On the way to the station house with an officer.

A curious crowd of street boys, newspaper vendors, bootblacks and the like followed the policeman and his two little prisoners to the station house.

His humor was taking dinner; would not hold court today, and the two waifs were put into a comfortable cell upstairs.

Rags cried herself to sleep, while Bottles, hero like, sat by her side upon the cot and kept cheering her up by telling her that it would be all right in the morning.

And down stairs, under lock and key, the unlucky purse and ring were lying in the desk drawer.

"Next."

The two waifs, Bottles and Rags, were pushed forward until they stood in front of the desk before his honor.

"Bless me! what's this? Little ones, what are you doing here?" asked the kind faced judge, basking down upon the pair, through a set of gold banded glasses.

Bottles knew it was not proper for him to speak, and Rags could not.

"Officer, what is the charge against this pair?" asked the judge of the policeman who had made the arrest.

"Stealing a purse, your honor."

"Ah! that is a serious charge."

"But, sir, 't ain't!"

"Never mind, my little man; your turn will come. Let the party who made the complaint stand forward."

A tall man, clad in clerical garments, with long drawn visage, stepped forward. The corners of his trap like mouth were drawn down in a most solemn expression. He clasped his hands in front of him, and turned his eyes upon the little waifs, as though even their presence was unholy to his cloth.

"Your name?" uttered the judge.

"Rev. Abraham Clearstarch."

Bottles could hardly hold in the titter, which, notwithstanding the solemnity of the occasion, was ready to bubble from his lips.

"You are a minister, are you not?"

The reverend gentleman bowed.

"Mr. Clearstarch, you may state your case in a few words as possible."

"Yes, sir. Day before yesterday afternoon, I purchased a ring for my daughter. I put the ring into my purse, and walked down to India wharf upon business. Upon returning to my hotel I found that my purse was gone. I retraced my steps; but to no avail; I could not find my purse. Yesterday afternoon at dinner in the hotel where I was staying I saw the ring upon the finger of this girl. I recognized the ring, and knew at once that she must know of the purse. I left the dining room, found no officer and had him make the arrest. The girl picked my pocket."

"Sure of that, Mr. Clearstarch?" asked his honor.

"She must have done so. I certainly could not have lost it," responded the reverend gentleman.

"Was the purse and ring found upon the person of the culprit?" asked the judge of the officer.

"The ring was upon the girl's finger, the purse in the boy's pocket."

"Bad case. Now, my little man, tell your story."

"If you please, sir, I'm only a boy, rough and all that, sir. I swear sometimes and—may be you wouldn't believe me. She'll tell you all 'bout it. You see, she's only a little girl what hain't got no friend in all the world but Bottles—Bottles is me, sir. Rags is her name. She never swears and—she never picked his pockets. I know that, 'cause I'm her father, you see."

Bottles had found his tongue and he delivered the foregoing in a straightforward way, which made the judge smile good naturedly.

"Now, Rags, tell it all. Don't be scared. The gospel sharp can't hurt us," whispered Bottles to the trembling girl by his side.

With frequent sobs and choking exclamations Bottles told her story, which you already know. She also told how good Bottles had been to her; how he had often gone without anything to eat so that she should have food. In all, she gave a faithful picture of the peculiar life which surrounded the pair.

The judge was assured of her truth, and after she had ceased, he said:

"It's evident that the girl has told what is true. Is there any one in the room acquainted with the pair?" A sleek, fat, jolly looking man stepped forward and said:

"I know them, your honor. I keep a butcher shop down in South street. A newsboy came and told me last night that Bottles and Rags had been arrested. Your honor, I stand here to say, from the bottom of my heart, that I know both of them to be honest, square and upright. They are unfortunate children of the street who make an honest living. I hope your honor won't be hard on the two poor little kids."

"They are both discharged. Mr. Clearstarch, you will get your purse and ring of the clerk. One thing more—you'll not find the whole amount. The cashier of the Crawford restaurant just sent me a note, telling me how the two little unfortunate enjoyed their Thanksgiving dinner at his place yesterday. Of course, having recovered your property, you will willingly donate that dinner for charity's sake. Next."

The Rev. Abraham Clearstarch got his purse and ring, and went on his way.

And Bottles and Rags found in a kind stranger who had been present a friend in whom philanthropy was largely developed. The pair are, this day of Thanksgiving, eating a noble dinner at a home in one of our great western states.

At last the two waifs, Bottles and Rags, were safely harbored from the sterner blows of poverty.—H. S. Keller in Commercial Traveler's Magazine.

A COUNTRY THANKSGIVING.

Harvest is home. The bins are full. The barns are running o'er; Both grains and fruits we've garnered in. Till we've no space for more, We've worked and toiled through heat and cold, To plan to savor, to rest and to hold. And now for all these bounties store Let us Thanksgiving keep.

The nuts have ripened on the trees, The golden pumpkins round Have yielded to our industry Their wealth from out the ground. The cattle lowing in the fields, The horses in their stalls, The sheep and hounds all gave increase, Until the day of thanksgiving. And now the day is here When we should show the Giver that We hold these mercies dear.

We take our lives, our joys, our wealth, Unthanking ever day; If we deserve or we do not, The sun it shines always.

So in this life of daily toil, That leaves short time to pray, We're bound to thanksgiving day And if there be some sorrowing ones, Less favored than we are.

A generous gift to them, I think. Is just as good as prayer.

THE PILGRIMS' THANKSGIVING.

How It Was Observed by Direction of Governor Bradford.

The Pilgrim Fathers landed at Plymouth, as we all know, on Monday, Dec. 21, 1620.

Under favorable auspices the first harvest was gathered. With hearts of joy they secured the bountiful crop of Indian corn which had ripened in the fierce heats of August and the warm haze of September. As they looked on the heaped up stores—the first fruits of their toil in the new land—their hearts swelled with thankfulness that the Lord had so mercifully cared for them, and that, though sorely smitten with pestilence, they were now blessed with health, peace and freedom from the dread of famine.

Mindful of the Providence to whom those blessings were due (those stern, bold men were very devout), Governor Bradford proclaimed a solemn Thanksgiving feast, and ordered that preparations should be made for celebrating it with such festivities as were in their power.

Four men were dispatched into the woods to shoot wild fowl, and through the game had been gathered throughout the summer the quartet of sportsmen returned at night staggering under their burden of turkeys, geese and pigeons sufficient to provision the entire settlement for a whole week.

There was rare labor done by the good Puritan dames, plucking and dressing the game, pounding corn and baking it, getting out and polishing the tin and pewter table services brought from England and Holland, and scrubbing the wooden trenchers that served the poorer pilgrims in lieu of tin or pewter.

The roar of one of the great guns on the hill top announced the commencement of Thanksgiving. It was Thursday, Oct. 24, a little less than one year after their arrival in Cape Cod bay. In the different dwellings and over fires lit in the open air began the roasting and boiling.

When all had assembled the sergeant stepped forward, and the men, three abreast, with firearms shouldered, marched orderly and silently toward the meeting house.

Behind came Governor Bradford in his long coat of office, walking gaily, as befitted a governor.

On his right walked the venerable Elder Brewster in his preacher's coat, bearing the Bible reverently in his hands.

On the governor's left was the military chief of the colony, Miles Standish, his heavy armor laid aside for a short cloak, his trusty sword at his side, and a small cane in his hand as a mark of office.

Proudly he watched the firm tread, sturdy frames and serviceable weapons of the little troop before him, and was half regretful that among the subjects for the day's thanks-giving was the blessing of peace with all the tribes about them.

It was also a pity so many good muskets should be used only in shooting wild fowl, so doubtless he thought, for the sturdy little captain was, as he had said, a man of war, half of whose thirty-seven years had been spent in knocking about the world as a soldier of fortune.

The sermon of Elder Brewster was appropriate to the occasion. Never was he known to preach a better discourse or a shorter one, though it would be thought long enough now, particularly if the steeds of rosy-cheeked neophytes galloped tickled the nostrils of preacher and congregation, as it did them.

It was a Thanksgiving dinner, and no mistake about it. To be sure the tables were of the rudest, and there was not much display, nor were there the many little delicacies that can often be found now on Thanksgiving tables. But the turkey was there in all its glory of browned skin, rich gravies and palatable stuffing, and so were a number of other large, fat and small, roasted and boiled and baked over the embers. There was corn bread and hominy and puddings, and several little nicknacks such as skillful housewives could make up of the materials at hand. Nor were the tables altogether wanting in display. Some families had brought a few household relics from their English homes, and these were set out to do honor to the day of rejoicing.

The dinner over, the pilgrims turned to the homes they had left. As the day closed and darkness came creeping in from the pine woods around Plymouth, the settlers trod once more, in fancy, the green lanes of England or the busy streets of Leyden. They sang the psalms and songs that had been sung around their English firesides, and mingled memories of the past with thankfulness for the present and hope for the future.

Hark! An Indian shout, followed by a challenge from one of the guard. A sharp rattle of a drum, and every man grasped his firelock and rushed out in alarm. Nearly a hundred savages were pouring into the village with shouts and cries. But it was Massasoit and his brave braves. It was Massasoit and his brave braves. They brought with them five deer and a good supply of other game, as their contribution to the feast.

So the thanksgiving feasting was continued another day. By daybreak the fires were again set going and the work of roasting, broiling and boiling was resumed. This time venison was added to the turkey.

While the feast was preparing the Indians performed their dances, startling the white men and frightening the young folks and women with their wild yells and fierce gestures. When they rested Capt. Standish ordered out his soldiers in full armor and put them through their military exercises, winding up with the discharge of a volley from their muskets, and a salute from the great cannon on the hill top and the little cannon before the governor's door. The crash of the musketry and the roar of the ordinance terrified the savages, and they begged the "great captain" that he would not under again, lest he should kill them all.

On the third day the feasting was resumed, the Indian hunters going out to gather the day's game for the day's feast. A council fire was built, and around it speeches were made and new pledges of friendship exchanged. Then, with great ceremony, Massasoit took leave of the governor, his friend, the great captain, and the other chief men of the town. Standish, with the troop of musketeers, escorted the Indians a short distance from the settlement and gave them a parting salute.

Thus, with prayer and feasting, with godly psalms and Indian dances, with joyous songs, roaring artillery and English shouts mingling cheerfully with Indian whoops, was celebrated the first New England Thanksgiving.—H. Maria George in Demarest's Magazine.

A BRAKEMAN'S THANKSGIVING.

"Did we have any Thanksgiving at our house?" replied the brakeman, echoing an engineer's inquiry. "Well, I should say we did. I had a lay off that day. The night before came near laying me off for ever, too. Didn't you hear about that? Funniest thing that ever happened on the last section of 57, I having the rear end. I went up ahead to speak to the conductor, who was on the engine. It was as dark as a stack of black cats before the moon rose. As I stepped on the track slipped off a broken foot board right at the end of one of those infernal refrigerator cars and fell. I couldn't see a hand behind me, but I knew I was going down. I reached for the hand rail, but failed to reach it, lost my balance, and went down between the cars, breaking my fall by one hand grasp on the brake rod. I knew what that meant. It came over me like a flash. It was death, and I knew it. My first thought was of my wife and baby—of what a Thanksgiving dinner the superintendent would have with the turkey the superintendent had sent us, and me a-lyin' in the little front room all cold. I can't tell you all I thought in that second, and I wouldn't if I could. It was awful. I can remember striking the ground. I struck on my feet, my efforts to grasp the hand rail and my half grip on the brake rod having started my feet down first. The horror of that shock. Quicker than you can think the thought ran through my brain that in the next instant I would be crushed under the weight of the dozen cars behind me. But I wasn't. I fell headlong, the hand rail and ground round over, bruised and stunned, and then just in time to signal the express and stop it. Next day I was able to sit up in bed and eat turkey and receive the superintendent, who called to say that I should be promoted the first of the year."

A Thanksgiving Sentiment.

AN OLD FASHIONED DINNER.

The following is the list of the dishes at Thanksgiving dinner on a Pennsylvania farm. Everything with the exception of the pudding was placed upon the table at once, to obviate the necessity of rising, as the dear old hostess was none too strong and kept no servants, and yet cooked it all herself. At the head of the table was a large chicken pie, in the middle two roast chickens, and at the foot was an enormous turkey, and opposite the chickens a roasted pig. There were fourteen roasts of different kinds, three large cakes, puddings, preserves, pickles of four kinds, boiled onions, mashed potatoes, and turnips, apples, cheese nuts, custard, head cheese, biscuit, brown and white bread, and lastly a big plum pudding, and coffee. All this for thirteen persons. This dinner was twelve years ago, and all the diners still live.

McMaster, the historian, when asked for a Thanksgiving sentiment wrote this: "Every man today earns more money, wears better clothes, eats better food and more kinds, lives in a more comfortable home, knows more of the world, holds broader views than he could possibly have done when the Nineteenth century came in."

The first Thanksgiving day recorded was observed in Leyden, Holland, Oct. 3, 1575, because of deliverance from siege.

Such observances were not unusual in Europe. The first New England Thanksgiving was held by order of Governor Bradford, at Plymouth, in 1621, "that they might after a more special manner rejoice together." There were thanksgiving days in New England from 1631, nearly every year, for special purposes, and in the New Netherlands from 1644. During the revolution the observance was general, but after that was confined mostly to New England, till just before the civil war. During the war it was nationally observed and is now a general custom in nearly all the states.

The train had broken in two and I had fallen off the rear end. One of my arms was severely sprained, so also my left ankle, and I was bruised a good deal, but I could walk. There was my lantern by me. Just then I remembered that the through express was following our section, and that there was no one on the cars to flag it. I hobbled, almost crawled, back about three-quarters of a mile and found our missing cars standing in a curve and a cut where the express would surely have telescoped 'em, and let us all "Praise the Lord for his good works, for his mercy endureth forever."

THE BEST AND PUREST MEDICINE.

AN OLD FASHIONED DINNER.

The other day I was brought up to consider modesty: "Are you content to sleep near dear Mother Earth." "Prude goeth before a fall," and who knows but that a storm may come and blow my ambitions companion to the ground, thus breaking his vain neck?"

So he took a seat on the lower limb.

A storm did not come, but the one on the lower limb was caught, and on Thanksgiving day was eaten.

Why They Were Grateful on Thanksgiving Day.

"Chilluns and friends, likewise Mrs. Jackson, we are now gathered around this festiferous board to discuss our Thanksgiving dinner, and to keep the service in our hearts what we're minded of by this bountiful feast. Now, my deah hearers, and likewise you, children we're each of us to express our thanks to the Giver for all we have. If in turn we are not thankful for, for myself, bein' the oldest, I kin say that I am thankful for everything; most pertiklest that I is 'bout over that rheumatism that boddens me so, and that Mrs. Jackson keeps in good health and plenty of washin', and that my chillun is all goin' to school and is a growin' up nice and gaint. Now, Mrs. Jackson, it's your turn."

"I gives thanks to de Lord for all his mussels; but I would like to say that I is very glad that there ain't no ornery, low down, white trash what can beat me a-polishin', nor a-cookin', nor in looks when I gets my Sunday close on."

"Mrs. Jackson," said the old man, reprovably, "that ain't in order, but 'lowing that long as it's so, ye ain't no wise to blame. Now, Cleopatra, let's hyar you."

"Law, paw, I don't like to say, but I is thankful all the same," with a look at Mr. Adonis Hawkiss, who smiled back as if he had the same reason for giving special thanks.

"Now, Abraham Linken Jackson, tell yer now, tell the company what you is the thankful for," said the benign old father in Israel to the youngest member of the family, after all the rest had expressed themselves.

"I is thankful 'et that there ain't no more us, 'cos if day was dat dure tukky wouldn't go 'round."

"Ahem! Let us say grace."

"A THANKSGIVING SERMON.

Of all the days that have been set apart as sacred to the people of this country, two stand forth in holy radiance as the outcome of the purest sentiments. The one is Decoration day, and the other Thanksgiving.

The one was born in loving memory of the dead, and the other in gratitude to the bountiful Giver of all we enjoy.

The flowers we lay upon the graves of our soldiers and lost ones are not sweeter than the thanks we offer today. Some, indeed, may not give articulate sound to their thanks, but it is safe to say that in all this broad land there is not one person whose heart, whether it is weighed down by sorrow or light with joy, does not send at least one grateful thought toward the source of all good, though perhaps they are hardly conscious of it.

Gratitude for favors given is a pure and ennobling sentiment, and meet is it that this youngest and most signalized blessed country should set apart one day wherein the whole nation, as we, should bow in silent thanks for all the bounties and blessings we receive.

We receive the feast in the spirit of a reminder that these blessings are but a part of the abundant store, and with the feasting the thanksgiving rises like incense. Let there be no empty tables in all the land, that not one small heart fail to offer its meed; and let us all "Praise the Lord for his good works, for his mercy endureth forever."

The City Charter.

The movement for a city government is now squared before the voters. Next Tuesday evening at the Town Hall they will be called upon to adopt the city charter drawn by the committee, and appoint a committee to present it to the Legislature. The revised draft is printed in full in the supplement of this week's PATRIOT. Slight changes have been made in nearly every section while others have been entirely rewritten. Among the most important changes noted are: 1st—Establishing the salary of Mayor at $1,000, instead of $500. 2d—Providing that the City Treasurer, not the Commissioners of Public Works, shall be in charge of the Waterworks or drainage. 3d—The number and manner of electing the School Committee; the board to consist of nine, of whom shall be at large and six from wards, so elected that one-third shall retire each year.

The draft deserves careful reading and a candid consideration. In a very few years at the most Quincy must become a city. Why not meet the issue now? It is useless to talk division, for there are no natural boundaries. A community, like a family, which has in common the joys of the success and shared the adversities for nearly a century, repels any attempt by those who have arranged the programmes in the past.

Three very desirable building lots at Atlantic will be sold at auction on Monday evening.

They are located on Squantum street, laden with dolls, tops, etc. January 1st minds us that we know not what the year may bring forth, and this is symbolized in the sale of packages whose contents are unknown. February is the fancy tale to be provided over by Martha Washington, March, so windy and disagreeable, drives people into their houses and makes them realize the sweets of home. Candy will be sold here in all varieties. April showers bring forth umbrellas; these will decorate the booth representing this month. Aprons of all kinds will be sold here, this being the dragoon's Society's tale. The month of May will bring out the upland by the May-pole. Inside will be a fine display of bags and baskets. THE NEW POST OFFICE. By the establishment of a postoffice at Hough's Neck the town will be greatly improved and increased to seven. Outside of the post office there are but three towns or cities in Massachusetts that have more, viz: Newton, 10; Barnstable, 9; and Falmouth, 8. The Hough's Neck office will be appreciated by the summer sojourners there, but it will not be a fat office for the postmaster.

In an interview with Capt. Boyd this week he informed the PATRIOT representative that he had leased a piece of land at the Quincy Opera House. The man was fortunate in securing the services of the Boston Opera Company and the Lotus Club, who presented the charming drama, Tops-Turvy, which delighted a large audience.

Washington used to be a great resort for congressmen during the sessions of Congress, scores of them coming and going daily.

The National Guard had been secured and a fine order of dances was tastefully arranged for the occasion. The floor was under the direction of Mr. John Westland, who with his able aids, had it all ready for the opening. To trip the light fantastic toe to the sweet music of the National Guard Band. Thanks are due to the Chief, Mr. Peter Kerr, and the other committee of arrangements, for the able and successful manner in which this anniversary was celebrated.

UNCLE TOM'S CABIN. This great mordram given at the Quincy Opera House on Thanksgiving day and evening, drew large audiences. In the afternoon, at the matinee, the children packed the house and greatly enjoyed the performance. In the evening long before the doors were open large numbers gathered at the entrance.

This is undoubtedly the best troupe which has played this time won high in Quincy. The version makes Uncle Tom, the hero, and does not make of him a secondary character. The character of Sam Legree was acted with wonderful realism, eliciting all the disgust that usually follows a drama of the disagreeable character. The two, Tom and Eva were very good, and while the draw forth laughs, the other moved to tears. The Marks were good, and the Jubilee Singers among the best who have ever visited us.

MERRY MOUNT LODGE. The members of Merry Mount Lodge, K. of H., have been called upon to mourn the loss of their brother, Charles F. Ewell, who died Nov. 14th, after an illness of ten days. The Lodge attended his funeral Nov. 16th, and sent an elegant floral design in the shape of a six pointed star, with the monogram, O. M. A. K. of H., 617.

AYER'S Sugar-Coated Cathartic PILLS.

If the Liver becomes torpid, if the stomach is constipated, and if the stomach fails to perform its functions properly, use Ayer's Pills. They are invaluable.

For some years I was subject to Liver Complaints, of which of which I suffered from General Debility and Indigestion. A few boxes of Ayer's Pills relieved me of all my trouble.

For years I have relished more Ayer's Pills than anything else, to my bowels. These Pills are mild in action, and do their work thoroughly. I have used them for years, and have found them to be the best.

Regulate

Ayer's Pills cured me of Stomach and Liver Complaints, and I have used them for years. I consider them the best pills made, and are not without them.

I am a man with a mission. This was which was followed by a mission, and was so dangerous that my friend despaired of my recovery. I communicated with Ayer's Pills, and my mission was a success, and I am now in my customary strength and vigor.

John C. Patterson, Lowell, Massachusetts.

Last spring I suffered greatly from a severe attack of Liver Complaints. In spite of every effort to cure this eruption, it increased until the flesh became entirely black and gangrenous, and I was compelled to submit to a course of with Indigestion, and distressing pains in

The Bowels.

By the advice of a friend I began taking Ayer's Pills. In a short time I was free from pain, my food digested properly, the bowels were regular, and I was well and, in less than one month, I was cured.

Samuel D. White, Atlanta, Ga.

I have long used Ayer's Pills, in my bowels, and have found them to be the best pills made.

My wife and little girl were taken with Dysentery a few days ago, and I at once gave Ayer's Pills, and they were soon relieved.

The Quincy Patriot.

SATURDAY, NOV. 26, 1887.

For the Patriot.

Immortal Truth.

Truth crushed to earth will rise again."

Though falsehood bind a wren chain,

So firm and strong that truth may die;

And in the dust forgotten lie;

Yet truth immortal will arise;

It is a child of Paradise.

And angel fingers sweep the lyres,

When falsehood in the heart expires;

Their voices blend in glad refrain;

When erring mortals they restrain;

When falsehood yields to truth for years, comes forth again—midst smiles or tears,

And in the palace or the cot;

That priceless gem is not forgot;

Though oft at times the spark may be;

Truth lives on eternally.

Around us shines God's love divine;

Sweet compensation—holy shrine,

Gives strength to head and heart;

When falsehood speaks its poison word;

It gives leaves a taste of sin and shame,

And suffers him to be the name,

When evils will cause him spread

Along the path that it has led;

When wishing not the truth to bear

Misrepresenting everywhere,

Such sins as these may be forgiven;

They surely cannot enter heaven—

Long they may knock outside the gate.

The angel truth there bids them wait;

Repentance may not be vain;

But the truth is here to bear the grain,

For ever from those spheres of light,

To laws divine all souls must bow;

And falsehood leaves the heart and head,

When comes a purer, sweeter flow

Of truth and love. The angels know

Immortal truth must ever live

When falsehood dares a crown to give.

Farm and Garden.

Trimming Grape Vines.

Professional grape growers need not be told when and how to prune their vines, it is being a necessary part of their business; but the majority of farmers are not so well informed and their vines are commonly left to take care of themselves without any pruning at all, except it may be to occasionally cut off a portion of the shoots that may have become too numerous to let in the sunshine or otherwise interfere with each other, but which unfortunately often does more harm than good. There is no more care about pruning a grape vine than about the operation of apple trees, although the operation is greater and of much more importance to the vine than to the tree. The best time of the year in which to trim a vine is in the Fall, after the frost has dekulped it of its leaves, and the sap has ceased its flow upward, when all that is necessary is to keep it in view the following simple directions:

First, a bearing vine is composed of a main stem and arms or branches of what is called old wood, i. e., wood of previous years, which is easily distinguished by the dark color of its bark. Then there are smaller branches of last year's growth, called canes. Now, remember that it is only these that bear the buds from which the fruit is formed—no fruit buds forming on the old wood—and it is necessary to cut off the old wood to make room for the new. The best way to do this is to cut off the old wood in the Fall, when the vine is at its best, so as to allow the new wood to grow well and quickly.

Second, the bearing vine is to be cut at the joint where the new wood begins.

Third, the new wood is to be cut off at the joint where the old wood begins.

Fourth, the new wood is to be cut off

at the joint where the old wood begins.

Fifth, the new wood is to be cut off

"Our Bar'l Cigar."

The chief merit of "Our Bar'l Cigar" is concentrated upon the "Filler," which every unbiased expert will pronounce to be CLEAR HAVANA of the highest grade known in the market, and without any artificial flavoring. The wrapper used on the above, while rich and glossy in appearance, pays no import duty, having been grown from the Havana Seed. "Our Bar'l Cigar," having been made by skilled city workmen of organized labor, its uniformity of workmanship, together with a straight HAVANA FILLER, will insure its popularity with the most fastidious smokers.

Day and Night

During late attack of Bronchitis, a ceaseless tickling in the throat, and an exhausting, dry, hacking cough, afflict the sufferer. Sleep is banished, and great prostration follows. This disease is also attended with Hoarseness, and sometimes Loss of Voice. It is liable to become chronic, and then it becomes a moderate chronic, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral affords speedy relief and cure in cases of Bronchitis. It controls the disposition to cough, and induces refreshing sleep.

I have been a practicing physician for twenty-four years, and for the past four years have had no attacks of Bronchitis. After exhausting all the usual remedies

I tried Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and helped to cure a severe case.

I was attacked, last winter, with a severe case of Bronchitis, and finally settled on my Lung. By night I slept well, but during the day I frequently awoke with a pain in my chest. My physician told me to give up business, or I would not live a long time. I had no time to attend to my business, and was relieved.

Where the birds have an unlimited range of the green fields for worms and insects and fresh grass, and plenty of clean water to drink, they demand but little of their owner's time, except now and then an occasional handful of grain.

The poultry is housed in very small quarters, the buildings are cold and the fowl get no out-door exercise.

A fair of the Business and Improve-

The Massachusetts Ploughman says the best way to have your manure is to provide about a bushel of the lawn cellar.

The manure is dry and porous, and will not dry sand or loam; these can be used in beddng. Sawdust is highly recommended, but while it is a good absorbent it is not valuable for its fertilizing quality.

The liquid manure is considered as one-half in fertilizing value to the manure of the animal.

"What to feed" is perhaps the most vital of the three points considered. The manure should be of a weight and consistence, either corn-meal, bran, and boiled potatoes, or scraps from the table. Add plenty of salt and cayenne pepper. When the birds cease to eat the preparation greedily, remove the dishes, and then sprinkle cracked corn or wheat. At noon another meal of heated small grains will suffice. For the evening diet give the birds all the whole corn they will eat, without being urged. I advise whole corn, because it is longer digesting in the crops, and keeps the hen warm during the night. In conclusion, it is well to always keep before the hen a plentiful supply of warm water, green vegetables and oyster shells.

IS THERE DANGER AHEAD?

WHAT WILL HAPPEN NEXT IN FRANCE?

Portrait and Sketch of Eugene Clemenceau, Who Strove for Grey's Resignation—Don Carlos Claims the French Throne.

The civilized world is just now watching with interest for the next developments in France. Grey has practically resigned, after asking Riol to form a ministry. There are fears of an uprising, which the French military authorities are taking steps to suppress promptly if it comes, and Clemenceau's name is on every one's lip.

CLEMENCEAU.

Why? Because it was virtually the refusal of Clemenceau to form a ministry that finally drove Grey to his latest action.

Eugene Clemenceau was born at Moulleau en Pareds in September, 1841, and was graduated as a physician in Paris in 1869. He was chosen to the national assembly two years later, but resigned because of complications between the government and the commune. He was made president of the Paris municipal council in 1875 and in 1877 was again sent to the national assembly, where he was accorded the position of one of the leaders of the Republicans. He has been prominent in French politics ever since. His career has been full exciting episode, not the least of which was a duel in 1871 with the Comte de Chambord, and calls himself "Charles XI of Spain," died childless Jan. 13, 1861, and his rights, or claims rather, at once passed to his brother, Don Juan, etc., Charles. He married Maria Theresa, archduchess of Austria and princess of Modena, which strengthened his claims a little, and the present Don Carlos is their son—born March 30, 1868. The old man, if we may say so affectionately of an alleged king and a real Bourbon, did not seem inclined to torment the Spaniards any longer, and would probably have let his claim lapse if his relatives and expectant friends had allowed. In 1868 he resigned all his claims to his son, and thereafter lived as quietly as they would let him, dying on the 18th, of heart disease, at the age of 65.

Don Carlos the son began his fight early. At the age of 19 he married Margaret de Bourbon, Princess of Parma, and thus "brought in," as it were, another claim to royal honors. As soon as his father retired Don Carlos began organizing another expedition for Spain, and the war began early in 1872. But there had been a revolution, Queen Isabella had gone into exile and the short lived republic was established. Don Carlos therefore, entered Spain July, 1873, and issued a high sounding proclamation that he had come to save the country from anarchy and ruin. In 1875 Alfonso, son of Isabella, became king, and Don Carlos addressed him a curiously haughty epistle, directing him to cease his cruel and rebellious conduct and allow the legitimate march to bless Spain. If not there were extensive particulars of annihilation in store for him and his supporters. After another year of hard fighting in the Carlist provinces their last stronghold was captured and Don Carlos fled to France. In 1881 he was expelled from that country for an ostentatious alliance with the Comte de Chambord's supporters. He took a flying trip to Mexico and excited much curiosity, but did not find them in the humor for a king. Since then he has been emphatically a king out of business. Now, the count of Chambord being dead, he proudly proclaims himself legitimate king of France as well as of Spain. It would be a rare comedy if such claims had not so often led to bloody tragedy.

His father, Don Juan, a Bourbon, died in exile at Brighton, Eng., Nov. 18. He had, in 1858, abdicated in favor of his son—that is, surrendered his unexecuted claim to the Spanish throne to Don Carlos. At that time the Comte de Chambord claimed to be "Henry V of France" by legitimate descent, and there was in France a large party in favor of restoring the old and original line of Bourbon kings. In French politics these are called Legitimists. They were greatly weakened by the death of the Comte de Chambord, as there are several claimants of nearly equal kin; but now Don Carlos puts in his claim, and if Spanish rights are not buried, it appears that he is really and truly the head of all the Bourbons.

To begin at the beginning, when the Franks came down upon the old Roman province of Gaul and laid the foundation of the present France, they had serious trouble in regard to "woman's rights." So the Salle ("seaside") Franks enacted a law that no woman should ever reign; their party prevailed, and so no woman has ever been ruling queen of France. If a monarch left daughters only, the crown went to his brother or nephew or remote relations in their order. Thus, in 1598, Henry of Navarre, son of the Count of Bourbon, became king of France and founded the noted Bourbon dynasty. His grandson, Louis XIV, outlived all his children, and one of his grandchildren, Philip of Anjou, by descent on the other side, acquired a sort of title to the Spanish crown. Charles II, lunatic king of Spain and the last of the Spanish Hapsburgs, died in 1700, and all the other lunatics fell to cutting each other's throats about the "balance of power"—that is, to prevent the union of France and Spain. They fought thirteen years, but Philip of Anjou gained the throne of Spain. He gave up, however, all claims to the French throne for himself and heirs—a cession now in bar against Don Carlos. There is already a party of Legitimists in France known as the "Blancs d'Espagne," who favor Don Carlos as nearest after "Henry V" or the Comte de Chambord. The other claimants belong to the Alençon branch of the Spanish royal family, descendants of the princess of Naples and Parma. Now France expelled her Bourbons in 1789-93 and again in 1830, so it is not likely she will trouble herself much about Don Carlos. The Italians struggled desperately against their Bourbons in 1848 and finally got rid of them.

Philip of Anjou, the first French and Bourbon king of Spain, outlived the talents of his race, for licentiousness soon sapped the original vigor and intellect of the Bourbons.

His son, Ferdinand VI, was too weak minded to reign, and his half brother, Charles III, took the kingdom. His son, Charles IV, ruled and ruined till 1808, when he abdicated in favor of his son, Ferdinand VII; then revoked his abdication and appealed to Napoleon Bonaparte, which led to the awful civil war in Spain and the loss of nearly all Spanish America. Ferdinand was restored, but insurrections continued. Then, in 1830, Ferdinand abolished the old Salic law of the Bourbons, and declared that his daughter Isabella should reign after him instead of his brother, Don Carlos. This was the beginning of a civil war, and in some form it has continued ever since. Isabella died Oct. 10, 1830, was a notorious queen and was finally driven to France, but we should speak charitably of her since she forbade the execution of the American private soldiers captured with the Lopez expedition and finally pardoned them at the intercession of the American minister. As soon as her father, Ferdinand, died (Sept. 29, 1833) Don Carlos called his adherents to arms and a civil war raged with horrible fury for six years, when Don Carlos was driven to France. He appealed to his Italian relatives, who sustained his cause, and between them on one side and the Communists or Radicals on the other Spain was kept in constant uproar for many years. Isabella, then grown to maturity, married her cousin, Don Francisco de Asis, and there was peace for awhile. The late King Alfonso died.

Don Carlos died, but his son, Don Carlos, son of Montemolin, who called himself "Charles XI of Spain," died childless Jan. 13, 1861, and his rights, or claims rather, at once passed to his brother, Don Juan, etc., Charles. He married Maria Theresa, archduchess of Austria and princess of Modena, which strengthened his claims a little, and the present Don Carlos is their son—born March 30, 1868. The old man, if we may say so affectionately of an alleged king and a real Bourbon, did not seem inclined to torment the Spaniards any longer, and would probably have let his claim lapse if his relatives and expectant friends had allowed. In 1868 he resigned all his claims to his son, and thereafter lived as quietly as they would let him, dying on the 18th, of heart disease, at the age of 65.

Don Carlos the son began his fight early.

At the age of 19 he married Margaret de Bourbon, Princess of Parma, and thus "brought in," as it were, another claim to royal honors.

As soon as his father retired

Don Carlos began organizing another expedition for Spain, and the war began early in 1872. But there had been a revolution, Queen Isabella had gone into exile and the short lived republic was established. Don Carlos therefore, entered Spain July, 1873, and issued a high sounding proclamation that he had come to save the country from anarchy and ruin. In 1875 Alfonso, son of Isabella, became king, and Don Carlos addressed him a curiously haughty epistle, directing him to cease his cruel and rebellious conduct and allow the legitimate march to bless Spain. If not there were extensive particulars of annihilation in store for him and his supporters. After another year of hard fighting in the Carlist provinces their last stronghold was captured and Don Carlos fled to France. In 1881 he was expelled from that country for an ostentatious alliance with the Comte de Chambord's supporters. He took a flying trip to Mexico and excited much curiosity, but did not find them in the humor for a king. Since then he has been emphatically a king out of business. Now, the count of Chambord being dead, he proudly proclaims himself legitimate king of France as well as of Spain. It would be a rare comedy if such claims had not so often led to bloody tragedy.

To begin at the beginning, when the Franks came down upon the old Roman province of Gaul and laid the foundation of the present France, they had serious trouble in regard to "woman's rights."

So the Salle ("seaside") Franks enacted a law that no woman should ever reign; their party prevailed, and so no woman has ever been ruling queen of France. If a monarch left daughters only, the crown went to his brother or nephew or remote relations in their order. Thus, in 1598, Henry of Navarre, son of the Count of Bourbon, became king of France and founded the noted Bourbon dynasty. His grandson, Louis XIV, outlived all his children, and one of his grandchildren, Philip of Anjou, by descent on the other side, acquired a sort of title to the Spanish crown. # AN ARMORED WAR SHIP

TO BE BUILT IMMEDIATELY AT THE BROOKLYN NAVY YARD.

The First Naval Vessel to be Built by the United States on the New Plans—Something About the Discussions These Plans Have Brought Out—Plans Described.

Reduced copies of the drawings and the main specifications of the armored war ship which the secretary of the navy has just ordered to be built at the Brooklyn navy yard are here presented. Our readers may be sure of hearing a great deal about it before the winter is over, as this is the first naval vessel to be built by the United States on the new plans, about which there has been so much discussion, and over which there is almost certain to be political fight. As the drawings are sectional only, the reader must imagine how the completed ironclad will look upon the water; but he can easily make out the two important points—that the engines and steering apparatus are thoroughly protected and that the two revolving turrets are in echelon—that is, fore and aft, on different sides of the vessel, so that both can fire to rear or front as well as to either side, instead of being amidships and central. One of the points discussed with much heat among naval experts is as to whether this arrangement gains as much in one direction as it loses in others. The reader will also get a closer idea of the discussions by bearing in mind that this design is but slightly changed from that of the celebrated Brazilian warships Riachuelo and Aquidabu, but that the naval authorities claim that they have secured more strength without losing anything in activity, a claim disputed, of course, by the opposition.

The length of the new cruiser will be 310 feet; breadth, 57 feet; draught, 21 1/2 feet; displacement (with 400 tons of coal aboard), 6,648 tons; horse power, 3,528; speed, 17 knots per hour; thickness of iron, 1 1/2 inches, and thickness of turrets, 25 inches.

The main battery will consist of two 16-inch and six 6-inch breech loading guns, the former being in the turrets, two in each. For each gun in the turrets two loading positions are provided. The 6-inch guns are placed, two forward and two aft, on the main deck, and two on the central superstructure deck; all are on central pivot mounts, with segmented steel shields two inches in thickness. The secondary battery consists of twenty-five machine guns, including four Gatlings, all arranged to secure a heavy bow and stern fire. The vessel is also fitted with seven torpedo tubes for the discharge of fish torpedoes, and carries two 60-foot steam torpedoes, both with a speed of 18 knots.

Some other points may be gleaned from the history of the department. It is a well known fact that the late civil war completely revolutionized naval warfare, but it is not so well known that a much greater revolution was effected in the ensuing fifteen years, during which the United States did practically nothing, and that the constructions of that era are now so far out of date that the nation must begin anew the construction of a navy. In these fifteen years, however, there have been many experiments with and much study of fast cruisers, armored battle ships, coast defense vessels and torpedo crafts, so that the United States now has experienced and skillful men in well equipped shipyards and home foundries, and the secretary is confident that taking the best model vessel made abroad, American skill will make a better one. But experts differ so radically as to what is the best that only time and trial can determine it. And it is also urged that certain American designers have devoted so much special study to armored ships that they laid before the secretary original designs better than any model he could select. The act of congress authorizing two sea going, double bottomed, armored vessels of at least 6,000 tons displacement, was passed Aug. 3, 1886. It required that they should have a speed of at least sixteen knots, with engines having all appliances for working under a forced draught, and costing, including engines and excluding armament, not more than $2,500,000. Secretary Whitney invited naval constructors throughout the world to submit designs, and held himself free to have the work done wherever it should seem to him best. All the plans and proposals were submitted to the naval advisory board, with request that they select the best. After long and careful consideration the board decided that none was exactly suitable for the proposed vessel, but recommended the construction of an armored battle ship, quite aside from the two first intended, after plans submitted by the Barrow shipbuilding company. Secretary Whitney acted on that recommendation, and the battle ship is to be built at the Norfolk navy yard. At the same time he went on with the original plan, and with the aid of the chiefs of the bureaus of construction and repair, of equipment and of steam engineering and ordnance determined to construct the vessel of which we present drawings. It is, as foreseen, of the general plan of the Brazilian Riachuelo, but will have, as claimed, greater power, both offensive and defensive. The

RESULTS OF THE MERSEY STORM.

One is of cast steel, heavily strengthened for ramming; the hull is entirely of steel, with a double bottom; there are water tight frames within this double bottom, and all the vital parts are protected by a steel armor belt from three feet above to four feet below the water line. The coal capacity is 822 tons, and the coal is so stored as to afford additional protection to the engines. There are provisions for living, ventilating, protecting the pilot house and all other vital needs too tedious to detail. Such are the main features of the first armored ship of the navy; and before congress gets done debating over it, it will be afloat and able to testify for itself.

SOME SEA DISASTERS.

HOW THE STEAMER W. A. SCHOLTEN WENT DOWN.

Cut of the Lost Steamer and Her Captain—Important Disasters of the Past. The Recent Gale on the Mersey, England.

The recent loss of the Dutch steamer W. A. Scholten in the Straits of Dover, and but a few miles from that city, adds one more to the long list of shipwrecks and disasters at sea. The Scholten was the twenty-sixth vessel sunk in the English channel since the beginning of 1870. The record is indeed appalling. All the scenes and incidents of the Scholten's loss were remarkably like those in the noted Arctic wreck in 1853—the wreck so celebrated by the pathetic and eloquent funeral sermons delivered by Henry Ward Beecher. There was in both cases the same happy confidence of scores of passengers rudely interrupted by the fatal crash into another vessel in this case the Rosa Mary, of Dover, in that of the Arctic, the French vessel Vesta; there was the same mad rush of frightened passengers demoralizing the crew, the same loss of life in launching, and, humiliating to relate, the same cowardly desertion by the crew, which seized on the means of escape and beat off the passengers. But it is a melancholy pleasure to record that Capt. Taat, of the Scholten, like Capt. Luce, of the boats in launching, and, humiliating to relate, the same cowardly desertion by the crew, which seized on the means of escape and beat off the passengers. But it is a melancholy pleasure to record that Capt. Taat, of the Scholten, like Capt. Luce, of the

SUPPLEMENT.

SATURDAY, DEC. 10, 1887.

Midwinter Trips to California.

While New England is encased in ice and snow, Californians are reveling amid flowers and feasting on freshly ripened oranges. The winter climate on the Pacific Coast, from San Diego to San Francisco, is delightful; and now that transcontinental travel has been made so easy and luxurious by that enterprising firm of excursion managers, Messrs. Raymond & Whitecomb, Eastern people can readily exchange their frigid surroundings for something more congenial. A journey across the continent is much less of an undertaking than was a trip to Chicago a dozen years ago, especially when one can step on board a "hotel on wheels" in Boston, and make no change of cars until the train is drawn up at the doors of the Raymond, the Hotel del Monte, or some other of the great winter resorts of the Pacific Coast. There are to be four different trips in January by three different routes, each of which has its special features of attraction. Pullman palace dining-cars or hotel cars are attached to all the four trains, so that the passengers are sure of having their meals at regular hours throughout the journey. The dates of departure are the 2d, 12th, 16th, and 23d. The first of the two Mexico tourist parties will also leave Boston on the 10th of January. Descriptive circulars, either of the winter tours or of the Mexico trips, may be obtained at W. Raymond, 229 Washington street, opposite School street, Boston.

The Bank of England.

New York Sun says: The Bank of England doors are now so finely balanced that a click, by pressing a knob under his desk can close the outer doors instantly, and they cannot be opened again except by special process. This is done to prevent the daring and ingenious unemployed of the metropolis from robbing the bank. The bullion department of this and other banks are nightly submerged several feet in water by the action of the machinery. In some banks the bullion department is connected with the manager's sleeping-room, and an entrance cannot be effected without shooting a bolt in the dormitory, which in turn sets in motion an alarm. If a visitor during the day should happen to knock off one from a pile of half sovereigns the whole pile would disappear, a pool of water taking its place.

Atmospheric Contamination.

Not a little has been done already by means of household ventilation and systematic house drainage to purify the air we breathe. In another direction very little indeed has been accomplished, though measures of reform are not only most desirable, but are likely in many cases to become, if carried out, an actual source of income. We refer to the refuse product emitted by manufacturers and workfields. Notwithstanding the circulation of fresh air which is constantly flowing over town and country, it must be allowed that there is in many places an excess of noxious matter in the atmosphere above what is compatible with healthy life. Coal dust, iron filings, clay from pottery, carbolic gases from brickfields, sulphurous gases and hydrochloric acid from metal and chemical works beside ammonical vapors, vitriols and nitric acids, arsenious and other metallic fumes organic gaseous products of decay, are still freely cast forth in the surrounding air. Their influence in the atmosphere is often, plainly perceptible by the senses, and it is not as plainly poisonous, has, without doubt, its share in that subtle impairment of vitality to which we have referred. The question relating to atmospheric contamination from this source and its treatment is a large one and deserving of consideration alike by economists, sanitarians and the general public.—London Lancet.

How the Joke Worked.

"I want the biggest and best water melon in that lot," he said, as he surveyed a great pile of watermelons in front of a Woodward Avenue grocery.

"Yes sir—here it is—best melon I've seen this year."

"Plug it," was the brusque command.

"Yes, sir—splendid red core. Shall I put it on ice?"

The purchaser drew from his pocket a flask of port wine and proceeded to pour the contents into the orifice. The melon readily absorbed the liquid and when the plug was replaced the man chuckled: "He! he! I want that melon sent to the temperature fanatic! Say nothing, and it will be a big joke on him."

A couple of days later the man came around to the store again and asked:

"Well, the melon was sent up?"

"Oh, yes."

"And the boy didn't give my little plot away?"

"On, no; but we heard from it."

"You did? He! he! he! What did he say?"

"He and his family were off up the lake, but the hired girl and coachman said it was the finest melon they ever put tooth into!"—Detroit Free Press.

What to Teach Your Boys.

Teach them to be useful.

Teach them to be truthful.

Teach them to be manly.

Teach them to be polite in manners.

Teach them the value of time and money.

Teach them to avoid tobacco and strong drink.

Teach them careful and correct business habits.

Teach them, by example, how to do things well.

Teach them to ride, drive, jump, run and swim.

Teach them how to get the most for their money.

Teach them the habits of cleanliness and good order.

Teach them to avoid profane and indecent language.

Teach them to be neat and genteel in their appearance.

Teach them to be polite to one another, helpful to the old and weak, and kind to animals.

A Promiscuous Title.

"Doctor" is a very promiscuous title in America. The preacher is a "doctor." The school principal is a "doctor." The family physician is a "doctor." The dentist is a "doctor." The dental is a "doctor." The manufacturer of patent medicines is a "doctor." The removal of pedal excrements "without pain" is a "doctor." And so on. There are almost as many "doctors" in the North as there are colonels in the South. But this is a free country. In Germany, under the despotism of a monarchy this freedom is not allowed. An American tooth carpenter has just been fined in Berlin for putting "doctor" on his title.

The fork should have two slender, curving tines about three-eights of an inch apart and two and a half inches long, and should have a guard.

—Mary J. Lincoln, in GOODHOUSEKEEPING.

Worth Making Note Of.

Every time I spend a dollar foolishly I am opening a pauper's grave.

Every time I pay rent I am taking so much away from a home of my own.

Everybody time I speak a kind word I am adding a brick to my temple of manhood.

Every time I buy an article I am encouraging the manufacturer or producer.

Every time I pay a debt I am doing right and helping to put money in circulation.

Every time I refrain speaking in defense of a friend I prove that I am not a friend.

Every time I speak cross and impetuously I'm weakening my nerve power and adding to the misery of others.

Those that place their hope in another world have in a great measure conquered dread of death and unreasonable love of life.

The desire of fame betrays an ambitious man into indecencies that lessen his reputation; he is still afraid lest any of his actions should be thrown away in private.

—Dry Goods Chronicle

Petrified Salmon.

A specimen of petrified salmon was found on a hill 1500 feet elevation above Big Valley, Cal., and which was evidently turned to stone at that point, indicating that salmon inhabited ancient rivers, the beds of which now form the stratas of the Sierra Nevada mountains.

No Better in the Market.

Boy (in great haste).—Me mudder sent me for some cheese. Got enny wat's good?

Grocer (affably).—Yes, sonny, we've got some that I can recommend highly.

It's made under our own direction, at our own dairy, from pure Orange County milk, and is of an exceptionally mild and pleasant flavor. About how much will you have?

Boy—Gimme enough ter bait a rat-trap with.—New York Sun.

A Cure for Whooping Cough.

A medical journal gives the following recipe for whooping-cough, which is said to be most effectual. The method consists in fumigating with sulphur the sleeping-room, as well as any other room used by the patient, together with his bedding, clothes, toys and everything which he uses. The sulphur is simply burned in the apartments, while the clothes are hung up in any convenient manner, and the rooms remain closed, and subjected to the fumes for about five hours. Everything is then well aired, and the rooms are once more ready for the occupation of the sufferer.

Something Pleasant.

"Can't you say something pleasant to me?" said a husband to his wife as he was about to start for his office.

They had had a little quarrel, and he was willing to "make up."

"Ah, John," responded the penitent lady, throwing her arms around his neck, "forgive my foolishness. We are both in the wrong. And don't forget the baby's shoes, dear, and the ton of coal, and we are out of potatoes; and John, love, you must leave me some money for the gas man."—New York Sun.

Little Ruth's Share.

Little Ruth sat at table and heard each remark made as the plates were passed.

One wanted a "small piece." Another, "a very little," etc. When it came her turn, she reached her plate out eagerly toward the coveted food.

"I'll take too much, if 'oo pease, papa," she said with naive sincerity.

January fill the dyke, February black and white.

A January spring is worth nothing.

A summerish January indicates a winterish spring.

Hoar frost and no snow is hurtful to field, trees and grain.

Fog in January brings a wet spring.

There are signs of another revolution in France. A republic resting on a large standing army is not a very stable institution.

Look on the bright side of life. An unhappy disposition brings the wrinkles to one's face. Fretting makes one look old faster than work or poverty. Fault finding eats away at the heart like a worm at a tree and makes one withered. Poor air and a cheerful heart are better for the health than good air and a gloomy heart. People look ten years younger when they smile than when they groan. A jolly old lady rolls back old age. Cheerfulness sets blood flowing from head to foot, kindles fire in the eyes, brings beauty to the cheeks and gives quickness to the step. Laughing is a constant tonic which wakes up

A Common Cold

It is often the beginning of serious affection of the Throat, Bronchial Tubes, and Lungs. Therefore, the importance of early and effective treatment cannot be overestimated. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral may always be relied upon for the speedy cure of a Cold - - - - -

Last January I was attacked with a severe cold, which, however, became better, worse, finally settling on my nose. A terrible cough settled in my chest, and I suffered intensely. After trying various remedies, without much success, I took Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and the result was a rapid and permanent cure. - H. E. Simpson, Peoria, Ill.

Then I suffered from a severe cold, which settled on my Lungs. I consulted various physicians, and took the only temporary relief. A friend induced me to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. After taking it, I was soon well again. I can now say that the result was a rapid and permanent cure. - H. E. Simpson, Peoria, Ill.

A Christmas Greeting.

Christmas, the most joyful season of the year is now upon us, that the foot-prints of old Santa Claus can be seen every where. The greetings tomorrow, by young and old, to relatives and friends will be, "I wish you a merry Christmas," and God pity the one whose heart can give no response to those cheery words. Christmas comes full of the presence of joy, and holds out to mankind the most blessed of hopes. The Star of Bethlehem is the beacon light of the civilized world, and its rays illuminate the world with the words of "Peace on earth, good will to men."

Well may Christmas be regarded as the coronet of precious jewels encircling the brow of all the year, the good angel which comes at the close of the year to give the venerable guest one farewell glimpse of joy; he has tasted, and held in his hand the lamp which shall illumine his path to eternity.

Christmas is the time for unity and mutual deeds of kindness and love, and these are expressed, not only by the pleasant "Merry Christmas to you," but by little gifts of love exchanged among friends; but we remember those we love and esteem with our tokens, let us not forget that there are many among us on whom these blessings of Christmas time have not been bestowed; to such, out of our abundance carry some of the happiness and warmth, which surrounds our hearts and homes and thus learn that it is more blessed to give than to receive. Readers one and all we wish you

MERRY CHRISTMAS.

A Valuable Subscriber.

A gentleman of Quincy, who has been a subscriber to the PATRIOT for many years, as was his father before him, paid us this week five dollars for two years' subscription in advance. This is not the first or second time he has done this gentlemanly act, but it has been his custom for years. Now, with many years' experience at newspaper business, we feel confident in saying that there are very few subscribers to newspapers who go to the publishers and pay five dollars for a paper two years in advance. Some of our subscribers pay for several months, will call and pay for the present year and a year in advance, making a payment for two years at one time; but he who will call and pay two years in advance is a jewel, and we should be pleased to receive a subscriber as modest man, who we believe lives a good life for the pleasure it gives him, and not for the purpose of having it published to the world, we feel it our duty to withhold it.

The Best Town to Live In.

Quincy can hardly expect to obtain either of the Record's public library prizes on the merits of the sketch published on Tuesday evening. The school committee, however, will be pleased to receive a donation from the British American Association. Prominent speakers from the post-office department.

For many a year I've chewed tobacco and I never found any brand as good as FINZER'S "OLD HONESTY." I smoke too, and used to use the same tobacco for both, but now I buy smoking tobacco for smoking, and "OLD HONESTY" for chewing, and I tell you boys there's a heap more satisfaction in it, and it don't cost any more. When I buy "OLD HONESTY" I always look for the red "H" tin tag, and then I never get fooled. "OLD HONESTY" is only made by JOHN FINZER & FROS, Louisville, Ky.

HOLIDAY PRESENTS.

Imagine how much money years gone by has slipped from your hands for knickknacks, to be placed upon a shelf to be knocked off by mother, grabbed by baby, passed to the dog and chewed beyond recognition in less time than it takes to tell it.

Some parents may say, "Why, we have no babe or dog," but these people know not how quick they may be blessed.

Now, Parents I know will agree with me,
And Brothers and Sisters will gradually see.

A DIFFICULT PROBLEM.

"TANK, NO OVERLOAD."

"All right; you shall have some of our coffee and sugar and pork. Boys, find the tanks."

Such boats! I see the children calling upon the small lake in Central Park. Some Yanks deserted the Army for tobacco, invented them for trading with the Johnnies. They were laid away under the banks of the river for summer's safety of ports.

Yank, I say, is a Yank. An Englishman answered for a sal. We loaded them with coffee, sugar, pork, and set the sal, and watched them slowly creep to the other shore, tank and all. The Yanks, I say, were tank, and push and scramble to be first to seize the boats, going into the water, and stretching out their long arms! Then when they were laid away under the banks of the river for summer's safety of ports.

Best of All.

The baby grasps at the empty air;

For the great old side-board over there

Is shining with silver bright.

The grandfather dangles his watch of gold,

And she hears the wheels go click,

And she tries in her pincusion hands to hold

That "but-say" round and thick.

They are wonderful things the baby sees;

But when she is tired of all,

And they wrap her up from the evening

With a breeze.

When the shadows begin to fall,

She is tired of the noise and busy world,

For the tired day to go sleep,

And she won't sit up, and she won't stay curled.

And she only wakes to sleep;

For the great old side-board over there

Is shining with silver bright.

SATURDAY, DEC. 31, 1887.

THE ORPHAN'S NEW YEAR.

Cold is the night, and the wind blows wan'
And the clouds send swift by,
And the stars are pale and still,
On a little orphan boy.
Wandering, friendless, alone in the dark.
Alone in the crowded street—
Less than naught to the human throng.
That careless pass and meet.

I wonder if ever a home he had,
This desolate orphan, and where?
The mother who bore him, did she love
That boy?—no, she did not, I know.
I wonder if brother or sister he had,
If ever a father he knew?
Or he ever eat of bread in his life,
Or of meat, as the rest of us do?

of going half a dozen yards out of your way, over to Eighteenth avenue."

"Yes, I did, John, and it was ne use."

"Now, Mary Ann, hush! hush! stop right there. What you lack, what you've always wanted, so to speak, is a good, strong will. By Jove! a man ought to look out for that in a wife.
You should be determined to get some thing certain and hold on to it. That is what I do. What you need is will power. The city's big enough. In one place—yes, to people for just walking through their store! Now, I don't care for climbing, but if you had simply walked through that a few times you might have had enough to give a nice present to the servants if not to all your friends, and never cost you—I mean me a single cent. But, no! you're the last woman in the world to surprise a man with a thing like that. You ought to have a stronger will, you really ought."

Mr. Dreswell's voice grew milder and lower as he leaned back in his chair. He had talked himself tired.

"To return to the point," said Mrs.
Dreswell, ironically, waving the said dress once more, "I would also like to get a dress for Sam's little girl, something pretty and durable."

"Well, I see no objection to that," said Mr. Dreswell, with a high, bright look of daring on his face, "none."

"It will cost $10," she added, adopting more direct tactics.

"Ten dollars?" said Mr. Dreswell was nearly speechless. "It's possible that you can't," he tapped his finger on the table at every word, "take a needle and thread and sew her up a dress for less than the amount of money that that's worth."

"Oh, you want will power! A good, strong will would make a woman of you, Mary Ann."

Mary Ann having been roused with great anger at every advance, silence now reigned for a while, until an idea struck Mr. Dreswell. He jumped upon the sofa.

"Now, my love," he said, with much dignity, "I wish to indulge and please you in every reasonable way, but I insist upon its being reasonable. I have offered you a great many plans and ideas, and also some money to-night, and now I have one more proposition to make. Suppose you lump the whole abominable business."

Mr. D. lost his temper a little here, but he paused, and regaled it. "How much do you want?" Speak out now, only be reasonable, Mrs. Ann. Bring your will to bear now, and make it as low as you can. What is it? Ah! you'll tell me, about it. Well, it's not too late, I'll have some expenses of my own to cash up shortly." Mr. Dreswell whistled cheerfully, glad to put off the evil day, and walked up stairs.

"Your affectionate father."

New Year's Call in New York.

The custom of receiving calls on New Year's Day, so long a distinctive New York institution, has almost died out. A few old fashioned people and families still observe it, but some of the ranks of the rich even of this country are not to be found among them.

"Now, my love," he said, with much dignity, "I wish to indulge and please

NEW YEAR'S AMONG THE GREEKS.

Interesting Ceremonies We Are Not Generally Familiar With.

BY OLIVE HARPER.

Christmas is a purely religious holiday among the Greeks, with none of that mirth and jollity observed among most Christians. There is no giving of presents and no toys or special pleasure for the children on that day. It is regarded with sentiments of solemn and holy awe, and is kept with fasting and church going, and there is no visiting or any other social meeting permitted, not only among the native born Greeks and those born in Constantinople, but also the Russians and Bulgarians, who are all Greek in religion.

Epiphany is also a solemn religious feast, or rather ceremony, which in that church represents the day of the baptism of Christ, and on this occasion a hosehead of the holy water is blessed and each family takes a can or bottle full home for future need. The service keeps up until midnight, when a powerful light is reflected in the church to represent the descent of the Spirit. Then the worshippers light their tapers and put them into lanterns and lanterns are lit, when they find their tables laden with dried fruits and nuts—nothing else. Before any one can eat a little holy water is put into each mouth and a lamp is lighted and placed before the picture or statuette of the Blessed Virgin, which is found in every orthodox Greek house, and this is kept burning seven days and nights.

The morning after Epiphany all the Greeks, Russians and Bulgarians who can get so far go to the port of the Black sea, where the priests are the most reverent at the entrance to the Black sea, to witness the blessing of the waters. The current here is very swift and strong, and is indeed called the Devil's current, and into the midst of this current full of floating ice the priest, after some ceremony, throws a silver crucifix. Instantly a dozen or more strong swimmers plunge after it, for it is a great honor to recover it, and besides the finder has a right to place it on a silver salver belonging to the church and go to the patriarchal Greeks and receive a present of money. No Russian or Greek captain will put to sea on any account between Christmas and Epiphany; but it is a beautiful sight to watch the sea of Marmora whitened with the sails of the departing craft the day after Epiphany.

But New Year's day among them is observed as we do Christmas; the children receive presents, toys, candies and fruit; the wives receive jewels from their husbands, and invariably a purse of money. The master of the house, wife and children, and even child and every servant in a house is obligatory upon the master, and he also is obliged to give to the postman and every other person who serves him in any capacity. Besides this, customary demands of him that he customarily visits to all his lady friends, and to none of these can he go empty handed. When he is ready to leave he finds the servants all drawn up in line and to each of them he must give a kiss. The only consolation he can find is in the fact that his friends have to visit his wife also and bear her presents.

At this all day reception the lady or ladies of a house are dressed in their best, and they offer coffee and sweetmeats to every guest. There is no wine or strong drink used.

At night the ceremonious visiting ceases and families unite, and the young folks, and old people, and play games and have a royal good time. Then a great cake, called Vasilopeta, is brought in and cut into as many pieces as there are guests. In this cake two pieces of money are baked, and the young man and girl who get them are king and queen of the year's feasts, and they receive artificial flower crowns.

The night before New Year's is kept as watch night, much after our fashion, and both are entered in every calendar for the date of candles, lights, dates, raisins and cheap toys. Extra mechanical toys, such as our children require, are unknown there, and parents give their children money according to their means, which is carefully kept until the child is grown, so that there is usually quite a snug little sum.

The women make presents of articles of their own handwork, such as silk purses and tobacco pouches, but rarely anything expensive. New Year's takes the place of our Christmas, and is a day for the women and children.

SOLILOQUY OF A TURKEY.

Christians, who is all happy thoughts, has passed away, and now today we greet the glad New Year. Yet still I'm sad, when I should be glad. To think I am sitting here.

My brother and sister and wife have gone to the land where turkeys go; And the fowls we drooping low, For a sad life with no wife.

Alas! day! and oh, done me! I don't know what I do. My family ties have been cut short, And I'm feeling very blue. I almost wish I had made a dish for the family dinner, too.

I feel, alas! I am growing old; And the thought of it makes me sigh: I am doomed to sit, while the sun goes down, Across the evening sky.

There's many a thing. Yet they say it's right, For I am too tough to die!

HOW THE NEW YEAR CAME.

NEW YEAR'S IN THE NORTHWEST.

Experience During Winter Holidays at Fort Totten.

BY J. H. BEADLE.

It was my good fortune not many years ago to pass the winter holidays at Fort Totten—better known as Devil's lake, D. T. Every day was full of novelty; this is one of the most interesting little communities in the cold northwest. Four different interests center there; the little population represents two great races, and two divisions of each, and the place has three names, according to the department of the one who names it. First, it is Devil's lake, being at the south end of that peculiar inland sea; but as there is a railroad town of that name on the north side of the lake, this designation is becoming obsolete. Then it is "Fort Totten," as the military posts at the lake are called. Third, it is "Uncle Sam's frontier posts." It is also the "Sisseton and Wahpeton Reservation of Sioux Indians," and last and best known is "the stone wall and post marked of Uncle Sam's frontier posts."

But New Year's day among them is observed as we do Christmas; the children receive presents, toys, candies and fruit; the wives receive jewels from their husbands, and invariably a purse of money. The master of the house, wife and children, and even child and every servant in a house is obligatory upon the master, and he also is obliged to give to the postman and every other person who serves him in any capacity.

Unhurried by his unexpected "rise," Dave gave him, first candy, then cake, and finally cried: "Now, boys!" and slipped a piece of tobacco into his proboscis, intending to get out of danger, and enjoy "Old Columbus'" disgust and anger.

But, before he could move, Columbus seized him, and whirled him upward through the opening overhead against the roof of the stable.

Unhurried by his unexpected "rise," Dave, dropping on the hay mow. The other boys were, however, supposing this to be the "trick" promised them, cried out in admiration: "Dave, Dave, do that again!"

Dave comfortably seated out of harm's way, very earnestly answered:

"No, boys! I only do that day."

only give time enough and supply them with schools and good farming implements." Now that the military post is no longer needed here, he urges the government to make the fort buildings a great training school for the children of all the 20,000 Sioux in Dakota, and I heartily endorse his recommendation. And while I hold a farewell talk with him, Jonathan Roberts, the fat and genial blacksmith, who is the leading citizen of the town, says to me: "I am glad to see you, Mr. Massey. You are a good man, and I hope you will be a good teacher to the children of Dakota."

It is good, the mercury only 8 degs. below zero, and consequently this "lovely January day" is my best day to go with him across the frozen water to Devil's Lake City, on the St. Paul and Manitoba railroad.

EARLY CALENDARS.

The Clog Almanac—The First Written and Printed Almanac.

Not every reader of these little books why the calendar is so named, nor the reason for naming one of the most indispensable of modern handbooks the almanac.

It was customary in old Rome to proclaim the first of each month, that the people might know the dates for the constantly recurring religious festivals. A lottery of the beginning of each new month was also used in public places, and first of the month took the name Kalendae or Kalende, from the Greek verb meaning to call, while the posted notice was applied the name Fasti Calendae. Later a book of accounts referring to days was called Calendar, a calendar, and from this the name almanac was derived. The first almanac was from the days of the Roman emperor Augustus, and was called the Almanac of Augustus. The first almanac printed in Europe was from the days of the Roman emperor Augustus, and was called the Almanac of Augustus. The first almanac printed in Europe was from the days of the Roman emperor Augustus, and was called the Almanac of Augustus.

The name almanac was derived from the name almanac, which was applied to a certain character named Ver
